Officials huddle on Bears' stadium for Arlington

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track, it was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $35 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clarbourn of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clarbourn said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clarbourn said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings, but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was 1½ or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clarbourn said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 5,000-unit housing development on race-track property.

Clarbourn said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 80-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center, The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill, it was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Phillip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

Des Plaines faces MSD suit threat

Metropolitan Sanitary District trustees Thursday threatened to file a $200-million lawsuit against the City of Des Plaines if continued city protests delay funding approval for a sewage plant on the city's west side. The trustees directed their attorney to file the suit if the city's efforts to control the design of the plant, at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street, delays a decision by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency past the June 30 deadline for the 1974-75 federal grants.

The sanitary district is hoping federal funds will pay for about three-quarters of the $95-million plant. It also was learned Thursday that the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission endorsed the projected size of the plant despite a commission staff recommendation that the size of the plant be reduced. The staff recommendation was based on a projected population in the area served by the sewage plant smaller than the population anticipated by the sanitary district.

'Interested' in school post

Kenneth Underwood, former superintendent of the West Virginia school system that erupted in a book-banning controversy, said Thursday he "would always be interested in a job in the Northwest suburbs." Underwood, reached at his West Virginia home, said he did not know if he would accept the position of superintendent of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 if it were offered. Underwood, 46, was superintendent of Schaumburg Township Dist. 64 from 1964-66. His name was submitted by Dist. 59 board member Judy Zanca to the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to be investigated as a possible candidate for the Dist. 59 superintendent's post.

Emergency transit grant sought

The North Suburban Mass Transit District is seeking an emergency operating grant of $374,357 from the Regional Transportation Authority to operate United Motor Coach Co. for the first half of 1975. NORTAN trustees approved the request for aid to the buses that serve Des Plaines and other Northwest suburban communities. NORTAN recently purchased United.

Accident ruling in crash death

The death of a Palatine Township woman who suffered fatal injuries Jan. 29 when a Schaumburg squad car crashed head-on with her auto was ruled accidental Thursday by a County Coroner's jury. Sidney Berman, a deputy coroner, said "I am quite sure that the operator of the vehicle (Patrolman David Mabbitt) did not use the proper care in caution in operating his vehicle. However, I do not believe that not exercising that care and caution is tantamount to criminal negligence." Mabbitt has been placed on suspension pending a fire and police commission hearing Feb. 22 on a departmental charge concerning care of equipment. Christine Lovan, 21, was killed in the accident, which occurred on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street in Schaumburg.

'Resigned,' but still on job

Donald Norman, Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who last summer submitted a letter of resignation as Wheeling village prosecutor, is still on the job. He said Thursday his resignation still stands, but that he has agreed to stay on until the village appoints a successor. Village Mgr. George Passolt said he has received "a whole lot of applicants" for the job but that Norman "will continue to serve as village prosecutor until another person is appointed."

Public hearings planned

FAA to evaluate jet-noise controls

The Federal Aviation Administration will schedule public hearings soon to evaluate jet-noise controls recommended by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA has drafted a series of proposed regulations that would reduce noise around airports such as O'Hare Airport by muffling jet engines and altering landing and takeoff procedures.

The FAA must have hearings within 60 days after receiving the recommendations, and either adopt, alter or reject the proposals as part of the FAA rules. Most of the suggestions, which came from a lengthy study by the EPA, have been sent to the FAA. A few will be sent within a week or two, a Washington EPA spokesman said Thursday.

ONE PROCEDURE the EPA has recommended in addition to refitting jet aircraft to make them quieter is a practice of keeping the planes at 10,000 feet before landing. The planes would then drop to 5,000 feet, then 3,000 feet to make a final approach to the runways.

Most of the technical recommendations have been made, the EPA spokesman said, but there are also plans to require the airport operator, such as the City of Chicago, to more properly manage the operation of airports. He said the requirements might include use of preferential runways, restricted operating hours and control of commercial airlines' use of the airport.

Many of the technical rules are designed to close loopholes in the present wording, the spokesman said. He added that the EPA can only make proposals to the FAA. If the FAA alters them, they have to justify the changes, and if they reject them, they have to issue a report on why the rules weren't adopted.

MILITARY POLICEMEN in Cambodia place bodies on a sidewalk after two of three 107mm rockets were fired into Phnom Penh, killing eight kindergarten children and wounding many others.

Kindergarten class hit by rockets in Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist gunners fired rockets into the Cambodian capital Thursday, hitting a kindergarten during classes and a busy thoroughfare near the central market. Military officers said the casualties included eight tots killed and 11 others wounded. Fragments of the deadly rockets ripped into young children, benches and walls of the kindergarten in front of the Information Ministry.

Phnom Penh commander Gen. Chhim Chhuon warned the population in a communique that pro-Communist rebels had infiltrated the Cambodian capital and surprise attacks could take place "any time." He told district and ward chiefs to start digging trenches.

In neighboring South Vietnam, Communist saboteurs attacked three civilian buses in the Mekong Delta, killing seven persons and wounding another.

In other world unrest:

• Government troops opened fire in downtown Lima Thursday to put down scattered looting and disorders in the aftermath of a police strike that developed into fullscale rioting.

The city — which at times looked like a battleground Wednesday — sounded like a mopping-up operation. Stretches of quiet were followed by bursts of heavy rifle fire as special soldiers and special police units brought in from an anti-subversive school scattered groups of looters.

• The official death and injury toll was not available, but informed estimates said that more than 30 persons were killed in the violence.

However, an official announcement acknowledged "some losses of life, numerous wounded and the detention of a great number of persons involved in the disturbances."

• Ethiopian government reinforcements smashed through Eritrean rebel ambushes Thursday to reach the encircled Garrison of Asmara in the seventh day of fighting reported to have killed 1,000 persons.

Diplomats in Addis Ababa said the American government had decided to evacuate the bulk of its remaining citizens from Asmara as conditions deteriorated.

Dallas chief won't reopen JFK probe

Police Chief Donald Byrd said in Dallas Thursday he will not initiate a renewed investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy as a result of recent contentions the killer was other than Lee Harvey Oswald. If reopening of the case is warranted, Byrd said, it should start with other agencies. Political activist Dick Gregory and a New York photographer, Robert Groden, said in Chicago this week filmed evidence shows as many as four or five persons shot at the president in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, none of them Oswald.

Church pledges coordinated CIA inquiry

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate's special inquiry into CIA activities, pledged Thursday to coordinate as far as possible with any House investigation. "I will stand ready to cooperate," Church told reporters at the conclusion of the Senate panel's initial two-hour organizational meeting. He said both the Senate and the projected House investigation might hold joint hearings, and devise "a rational division of labor."

Link wiretapping to 'police state'

Uncontrolled government wiretapping and surveillance have made Americans paranoid and could lead to "a future police state," Congress was told Thursday. Two members of Congress and attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union urged a House Judiciary subcommittee to approve a flat ban on any future federal eavesdropping on private citizens except under court order.

Airport map maker, designer disagree

A government airport map maker and a private airport designer disagreed Thursday over the adequacies of charts for the landing approach that claimed a TWA jetliner and 92 lives on a Virginia mountain top. Harry Ross of the Federal Aviation Administration said the approach chart was "entirely adequate" for leading a pilot to a safe landing. But Richard A. Shea, the private expert, told a federal inquiry that a cross-section "profile" of the descent should be extended farther than six miles from the end of the runway.

Crime down on rapid transit lines

Chicago Police Superintendent James Rochford said Thursday crime fell 54 per cent over the past 42 days on the city's rapid transit lines due to increased police patrols. Rochford said that 6,740 persons were arrested on trains or at train stations between Dec. 26 and Feb. 5.

Kissinger eyes Israeli stage II plan

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger hopes to get a detailed Israeli plan for a second-stage troop separation accord with Egypt in the Sinai desert during his extended Middle East trip next week, Israeli government sources said Thursday. The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said the Soviet Union has already told Egypt it approves a second-stage disengagement. Kissinger has also scheduled at least two meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Justice Department probes amendment

Wallace may be in office illegally

MONTGOMERY, ALA. (UPI) — The Justice Department said Thursday it was checking into provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act to determine whether Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is holding office illegally.

At issue is a 1967 state constitutional amendment which reversed an Alabama law preventing a governor from succeeding himself. The 1965 Voting Rights Act provided that any law change in Alabama, or five other Southern states, which might affect minority voting rights had to be submitted to the Justice Department in Washington for approval.

The Alabama amendment was not submitted, and a Justice Department official said the department was trying to determine whether it should have been.

"One major question to be answered first is whether the Alabama succession amendment is a change covered by the provisions of the Voting Rights Act," he said.

The spokesman said if it is found the state erred, Alabama would then be required to submit the amendment for review. "The amendment will then be evaluated to determine if it has a discriminatory purpose or effect."

Wallace, who many believed sought a second successive term as Alabama's governor as a possible stepping stone to the presidency, refused comment on the issue, which was first brought to light by the Birmingham Post-Herald.

Any action by the Justice Department in the case would affect not only Wallace, but Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley and Atty. Gen. William J. Baxley, both of whom are serving successive terms.

Beasley said he didn't anticipate any problem. "I can't imagine the election of the top three officers of the state and the vote of the people could in any way be subject to change," he told UPI.

Press Secretary Billy Joe Camp said Wallace just wasn't "going to say anything," and Baxley's office said he was out of town and would not return until next week.

The Birmingham Post-Herald is a frequent critic of Wallace. The reporter who broke the story said he picked up the tip in a conversation, but would not comment further.

Gordon Madison, a former assistant attorney general who would have been responsible for submitting the measure, conceded he did not remember whether he sent a copy of the amendment to the Justice Department.

"It seems like a late date to start snapping at gnats," Madison said. "I don't know whether the amendment was applicable under the Voting Rights Act, as it was interpreted."

Panel OKs $20 billion tax cut measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee, acting in only four days, approved a $20.1 billion tax cut bill Thursday that includes rebates of up to $200 for everyone who paid federal income taxes in 1974.

The bill, approved 28-5, would concentrate its tax relief on low and moderate income levels, but every taxpayer would get some form of payment from the government no matter how high or low the income.

House action appeared likely to come within several days after Congress returns from a recess on Feb. 18.

The Ways and Means bill was $4 billion higher than the package President Ford proposed as an economic stimulant to ease the current recession.

The bill would grant $8 billion in rebates — actually refunds — of 1974 personal income taxes, $8.3 billion in tax cuts on this year's income for low and middle income persons, and $3.8 billion in business and investment incentives.

The tax-writing committee, pushed hard by its new chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., began writing the bill Monday. Ullman had promised to keep the committee late into Thursday night if necessary, but work was completed in early evening with a round of applause and cheering for the work of the staff.

Changing its mind at the last minute, the committee decided not to cut off 1974 tax rebates to persons making more than $30,000 to $40,000.

However, anyone making more than $30,000 could get no more than $90 to $100. The final rebate figure will be calculated later to remain within a committee-imposed limit of $8 billion.

The rebate would work this way: Every family or single taxpayer would get back 10 per cent of the taxes he paid in 1974 up to a maximum of $200. Those who paid less than $100 in taxes would get back the full tax they paid.

The maximum would begin shrinking when income reached $20,000, phasing down to the maximum $90 to $100 at $30,000 of income.

A form of negative income tax for the working poor was approved earlier by the committee. This provision would grant a payment of 5 per cent of earned income to anyone making $4,000 or less even if they paid no taxes. This credit would phase out as income went above $4,000 one making more than $6,000.

Other income tax cuts for individuals would take the form of lower withholding rates in the last half of this year. This would be accomplished by increasing the standard deduction which many low and moderate income persons — and a scattering of the wealthy — use rather than itemizing deduction.

Ford requested only a 12 per cent rebate of 1974 taxes, up to a maximum of $1,000.

The $3.8 billion in business tax cuts would affect companies which invest in new plant equipment, and would help small businesses.

Wife of Wrigley family member murdered

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The wife of a millionaire member of the Wrigley chewing gum family was found dead early Thursday, her body stuffed in a barrel filled with concrete. Her husband's male nurse was arrested on suspicion of murder.

A missing person report was filed with police Wednesday on Nancy Atwater, 50, and questioning of the nurse, Daniel Bedelian, 40, led to discovery of her stabbed and bludgeoned body in an auto wrecking yard at Pacoima in the San Fernando Valley, a section of the city of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Atwater's husband, A. G. Atwater is the brother of the wife of P. K. Wrigley, head of the chewing gum firm.

Atwater is an invalid and requires nurses around the clock, police said. Bedelian had the night shift.

Police questioned him about the whereabouts of Mrs. Atwater and he led them to Pacoima where her body was found in a 55-gallon drum. Wet cement had been poured into the drum, but had not hardened properly and investigators dug through it to get the body.

Mrs. Atwater, police said, was wealthy in her own right and had been married to Atwater about eight years. MSD chips in for extra basin dirt removal Metropolitan Sanitary District officials Thursday appropriated $850 to help cover costs for extra dirt-removal work on the Arlington Country Club retention-basin project in Buffalo Grove.

The payment will be added to $4,000 being paid by four other agencies, including $900 by Buffalo Grove, to remove a layer of black dirt on a half-acre site next to the basin now under construction. Lindahl Bros., Bensenville, developer Clarence Marquardt and Arlington Country Club officials also are sharing the cost.

THE AGREEMENT TO divide the cost was made to avoid court action to decide who was responsible for the work not provided for in an original contract for excavation of the basin.

Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said Thursday that the $500,000 project, already delayed more than a year, could have been held up again if the matter had to be sent to litigation.

The five-acre basin is designed to provide flood relief to residents and businesses along Dundee Road and the White Pine Ditch area.

THE PROBLEM STEMMED from an unexpected layer of black dirt that was found under another layer of clay on the adjacent property Marquardt hoped to develop. Larson said Marquardt has village permission to build a Volkswagen dealership.

The black dirt had to be removed before the property could be built on but Larson said there were no contract provisions for the work.

"At the time the contract was prepared, no one knew it (the black dirt layer) was there and no provisions were made for its removal," Larson said.

Larson said Marquardt agreed separately with Lindahl to remove the dirt and replace the clay fill.

THE DEVELOPER, Lindahl, village officials, MSD and country club representatives later decided to share the costs.

Larson said the unexpected black dirt layer had probably been there for the past 10 to 15 years. There were homes on the site at one time but they were torn down in the early 1950s.

Officials say the retention pond should be complete by early spring.

The village is contributing $80,000 to the project to cover engineering, bridge and utility expenses while the MSD and the state are paying for most of the construction.

Village's newsletter coming back

The Buffalo Grove newsletter is back in circulation and residents should be receiving copies in the next few days, said Village Trustee Jerry Driscoll, chairman of the public relations committee.

"We've changed the format of the letter and we're looking for new ways to improve the layouts at low cost," Driscoll said.

The publication, mailed to all village residents several times a year, is a digest on village activities with information on village employees and new civic-group projects.

This year's first edition includes a donor pledge form for the upcoming Buffalo Grove Blood Commission drive, Feb. 18 at Buffalo Grove High School.

Driscoll said public relations committee members sent the letter out ahead of schedule to allow residents time to respond to the request for blood donations.

The letter is being resumed, Driscoll said after the last two editions of 1974 were discontinued when the village ran into financial difficulty.

The next edition will probably be sent out sometime after the village election April 15 with information on the newly-elected village officials.

$1,000 in photography gear taken from inn

An estimated $1,000 worth of photography equipment was reported stolen from a guest room at the Holiday Inn, 1000 Busse Rd., Elk Grove Village.

Jerry Gillis of Benton Harbor, Mich., a guest at the inn, discovered two cameras, a strobe light, three lenses and several cases missing when he returned to his room at 11 p.m. Wednesday, police said.

Gillis told police he locked his door when he left the room at about 9 a.m. Wednesday. There were no signs of forced entry.

Heritage Park to open Sundays, evenings

The Wheeling Park District's Heritage Park will be open Sunday afternoons and evenings beginning Sunday.

The gymnasium, 222 S. Wolf Rd., can be used by children in junior high school or below from 2 to 4 p.m., by high school students from 4 to 6 p.m. and by adults from 7 to 9 p.m. There is no charge.

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Koeppen says he weighed try for building director

by JOE FRANZ

Wheeling Trustee John Koeppen, a candidate for reelection in April, considered applying for the vacant post of village building director, he said Thursday.

"I thought of applying for the job, but then decided it wouldn't be such a good idea," he said. "I thought I'd be opening myself up to a lot of criticism because of my position with the village."

"The idea never got very far because I never followed through," he said. "It was a thought and the thought died because I never did take out an application."

The trustee said he considered applying for the post before he made the decision to seek reelection to the village board. "I was thinking about it in September or October, long before I had decided to run for another term," he said.

KOEPPEN, A candidate on the Wheeling Community Party slate, announced his candidacy in January. The Herald learned that Koeppen was considering applying for the post from Trustee Albert Lang, one of his running mates.

"The reason I considered applying for the job as building director was because of my experience," he said. "I have been associated with architects and builders in my business for the last 20 years and thought I could do a good job for the village."

Koeppen owns Wheeling Paint and Glass, 1209 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights. Another store he owned in Skokie was closed late last year.

Koeppen is one of several village officials who have shown an interest in the building director post. Plan Commission Chairman Herbert Lortz and Electrical Comr. A. M. Mansukhani have submitted applications and are under consideration.

Kenneth R. Brady, a candidate on the Wheeling Representative Party slate, applied for the post last year, but withdrew his application after becoming a candidate.

THE POST WAS vacated by William Bleber a year ago today following his indictment by a federal grand jury. Originally Bleber took a leave of absence, but later resigned after pleading guilty to extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, perjury and filing a false income tax return in connection with a local builder shakedown scandal.

Since last April, Robert Kaminski, an electrical inspector, has been serving as acting building director. When a new director is hired, Kaminski will assume his former duties.

Village officials had hoped to fill the job has been open for a year, they do not feel there is any urgency to make an appointment.

"We've been wanting to get this thing filled, but it's not that urgent because Mr. Kaminski has been doing a fantastic job," Trustee Ronald Bruhn said. "Besides, there hasn't been a lot of building going on so we can afford to take a little longer."

Koeppen and Lang said they would prefer the new building director is hired after the completion of a report by a consulting firm which is doing a comprehensive study of village operations.

"I think now that we've waited so long we might as well wait and see what suggestions are made by the consulting firm relative to the building director job," Lang said. "We're paying the consulting firm and should see what they have to say so we can do the right thing."

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said all hiring and firing is handled by Passolt and that he does not know why a new building director has not been hired. "I think the village manager probably has a good reason for not having hired someone by now," he said.

'Resigned' Norman still in village prosecutor post

by JOE FRANZ

Donald Norman, Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who last summer submitted a letter of resignation as village prosecutor in Wheeling, is still on the job.

He said Thursday his resignation still stands, but that he has agreed to stay on until the village appoints a successor.

"I have not rescinded anything I said in writing or orally," he said. "But I told the village I would serve until I was replaced, and I meant that."

Village Mgr. George Passolt said he is considering applicants for the post and said Norman will be replaced when the interviews are completed.

"I've had a whole lot of applicants for this job," he said. "He (Norman) will continue to serve as village prosecutor until another person is appointed."

Passolt denied that Norman rescinded his resignation and would remain village prosecutor indefinitely. "I have not heard anything like that," he said. "I've got a resignation from him and that's all."

NORMAN, AN Arlington Heights attorney, has served as village prosecutor for more than eight years. In a letter to the village he said he was resigning because of other responsibilities.

"I'm not as busy now as I was when I submitted by resignation, but it still is effective," he said Thursday.

Was Crane's trip necessary?

U.S. Rep. Phillip M. Crane, R-Ill., the conservative voice of the Northwest suburbs, got caught off base last week in one of the first significant votes taken by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Crane, who has served five years in the United States House of Representatives, was appointed to the Ways and Means Committee at the inception of the 94th Congress, a considerable advance from his former position on the Banking and Currency Committee.

Rep. Phillip Crane

At meeting of Ways and Means last week, the Democratic majority succeeded in passing a measure which appeared intended to embarrass President Gerald Ford. The Democrats passed by a 15-14 vote a resolution to combine into one bill an increase in the national debt ceiling — requested by the President — and a delay in the authority for the President to impose his import duty on oil.

Had there been one more vote for the Republicans, the Democrats would not have been able to pass this measure which potentially would put President Ford in a no-win position. Crane was absent.

There is considerable dispute about what Crane's absence meant to the vote. There are conflicting reports about the number of proxy votes held by both Republicans and Democrats on the committee, which could have altered the outcome had they been exercised.

As a matter of fact, the House Rules Committee later succeeded in gaining jurisdiction over the same measure and voted to separate the two issues, so that the question of Crane's vote is now moot.

What remains relevant is the question of why Crane was not present to cast his vote on this important question. At the time of the vote, he was touring South Africa as the guest of a South African millionaire. His staff described the purpose of his trip as a study of the "economic and political situation" in that country.

At the moment, we are not sure what relevance such a study has to the people of the 12th Congressional District, who elected Phil Crane to represent them in Washington. We would encourage him in the future to inform his constituents as to where he is spending his time — whether in the halls of Congress or on some foreign continent. And we await his report of what he learned on a two-week junket to South Africa that will benefit the district.

Andersen: good choice

Wayne Andersen of Des Plaines is an obvious choice to replace former state Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, in the General Assembly. At this point, we feel he deserves prime consideration.

Juckett, who died Sunday, was a conscientious, experienced legislator who served the Northwest suburbs for more than four terms in Springfield.

The four Republican committeemen — from Northfield, Maine, Niles and Wheeling townships — who will name Juckett's successor should look for similar traits in the district's next General Assembly member.

Andersen knows Springfield, for he served as Illinois House parliamentarian and as a legislative aide. He knows the suburbs as a resident, an attorney and as the GOP's candidate for county treasurer in November.

Although Andersen is a logical choice for the position, other candidates may appear. The best qualified candidate should be appointed.

An author departs

Chicago without author Nelson Algren? It's like Los Angeles without Smog, or Detroit without cars, or Milwaukee without beer.

Algren's long been one of Chicago's foremost storytellers. His works ("Man With the Golden Arm," "A Walk on the Wild Side" and "Chicago: City on the Make") describe the seamy but human sides of life in the Windy City.

He's part of the Hemingway, Sandburg and Dreiser literary tradition that grew up here — and now it's widely reported he's quitting Chicago for Paterson, N.J.

Yep, Paterson, N.J. — and Algren's elusive about his reasons for the move. If he's serious about the move, it's our loss and Paterson's literary gain — and we bet that Paterson can use all the help it can get.

No, he's busy studying in South Africa to better represent you!

Firm criticizes FTC story

The article in your Jan. 21 issue concerning the dispute between Beltone Electronics Corporation and the Federal Trade Commission contains three significant flaws — the headline is incorrect, the first paragraph of the article is totally inaccurate and the remainder of the story reflects the same inept journalism as is represented by the headline and the lead paragraph.

The author, Monica Wilch Perin, opens the article by saying, "Both sides have rested their cases in the hearing of Beltone Electronics Corp. versus the Federal Trade Commission." The facts are, the FTC has rested its case, but Beltone has only started to present its evidence. Hearing dates will resume in February and currently are scheduled into June, 1975, and are likely to extend throughout the summer.

Mrs. Perin also refers to the matter as, "... an anti-trust charge." It is not an anti-trust case. Unfortunately, the headline writer compounded Mrs. Perin's inaccurate reporting by stating, "Beltone anti-trust case rests with judge — Is hearing aid maker guilty of unfair practices?" The case will rest with the judge only after all the evidence has been heard.

It is understandable that a reporter unfamiliar with FTC proceedings could mistake a temporary recess in the hearings as the point at which both sides have rested their cases. However, a telephone call to either the FTC or to Beltone could have clarified the situation.

Because the hearings have not been completed, it would be improper to speculate on testimony future Beltone witnesses may give. However, it is proper to point out Mrs. Perin based a significant portion of her article on transcripts of testimony presented by witnesses called by the FTC.

It would appear logical that Beltone's witnesses will present contrasting testimony, and that an objective reportorial job would mandate the article to be held in abeyance until the defense testimony has been presented so that it too could be evaluated by the reporter — in the same manner that all the testimony will be

It was really great to find The Herald on the porch on the one day we have the most time to read it. The entire family enjoyed it. "Leisure" is especially appreciated because it helps to be ready for the weekend guests.

A 'dangerous' drive

A very dangerous situation exists slightly east of our subdivision street, Roppolo Drive off Landmeier, which is located west of Ill. 72, Higgins Road, and east of Busse, Ill. 83.

We have a stop-and-go sign; however, the entrance and exit to and from Reynolds & Reynolds, a company located in the Centex Industrial Park, slightly east of our Roppolo Drive, has no stop sign.

Recently, I yielded to all traffic at our corner and then only made a right turn, going west on Landmeier toward Busse, Ill. 83. Immediately upon completion of my turn I was struck by a car coming out of Reynolds & Reynolds, said car having made a left turn on Landmeier.

My husband and I have observed other drivers peeling out of that particular Reynolds & Reynolds driveway without stopping. Please note that the Rules of the Road, published by Michael J. Howlett, Secretary of the State of Illinois, page 23, item 4, specifically provide, "When making a left turn at an intersection, alley or driveway, you must first yield the right of way to traffic from the opposite direction."

The bard and the U.S. budget

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON — There is, in my judgment, only one fiscal analyst articulate enough to do justice to President Ford's new $349 billion budget.

I refer, of course, to the immortal bard and economist of Stratford-on-Avon, William Shakespeare.

Q. Mr. Shakespeare, would you give us a thumbnail description of the budget that President Ford sent to Congress this week?

A. "It's past the size of dreaming. A book where men may read strange matters."

Q. What was your reaction when you saw it?

A. "Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious, loyal and neral, in a moment? My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirred."

Q. Some observers are saying the budget at least has the virtue of being honest. Ford didn't try to gloss over the grim fiscal outlook.

William Shakespeare

A. "Though it be honest, it is never good to bring bad news. It spoils the pleasure of the time. Has this fellow no feeling of his business?"

Q. What is your own appraisal of the economy?

A. "The mast be now blown overboard, the cable broke, the holding anchor lost, and half our sailors swallow'd in the flood."

Q. You're not exactly a little ray of sunshine yourself, sir. Are you trying to tell us that we are heading into a deep recession?

A. "I myself see not the bottom of it. Our withers are unwrung. This house is turned upside down. So weary with disasters..."

Q. You've made your point, sir. What sort of reception will Ford's budgetary proposals get in Congress?

A. "They'll give him death by inches."

Q. The President is forecasting a record peacetime deficit of $31.8 billion. Whatever happened to the concept of balanced budgets?

A. "It is a custom more honoured in the breach than the observance."

Q. President Eisenhower's treasury secretary once warned that deficit spending would lead to "a depression that will curl your hair." What do you think is likely to happen this time?

A. "Each particular hair to stand on end, like quills upon the fretful porpentine."

Q. Porpentine? Well, anyway, there is one bright spot in the budget — a possible tax rebate. What do you suggest I do with mine?

A. "Haply your eye shall light upon some toy you have desired to purchase."

A. Thank you, Mr. Shakespeare.

I hesitate to register this complaint because as a former news service reporter and a business magazine editor, I fully appreciate the absolute necessity of press freedom. However, during the years I spent as a newsman, I also learned the absolute necessity of accurate reporting. For that reason, I feel it imperative to point out the inaccurate statements upon which this article opens and the distorted view it presents.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Herald incorrectly reported that this case had been sent to the judge. The letter writer is correct in stating that the FTC has concluded its testimony, but Beltone is continuing to present evidence at this time.

When the company concludes its testimony, the case will be decided by the administrative law judge. His decision may then be appealed by either side to the Commission, and the Commission's decision may ultimately be appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

According to Jerome Lamet, assistant director of the Chicago regional office of the FTC, any charge that a company is using unfair methods of competition — from price-fixing to corporate tie-ins — is an anti-trust charge. Beltone is charged with using unfair methods of competition, including price-fixing.

Percy may rejoin '76 race

by BOB LAHEY
Political Editor

The temptation surely is mounting for Sen. Charles H. Percy to take his presidential aspirations off "the back burner," move them back to the front of the range and turn up the heat.

Percy's pre-campaign machinery was just getting into gear when Richard Nixon finally relinquished the presidency and Gerald R. Ford took over the Oval Office as Chief Executive of the nation and the leader of the Republican Party.

In the euphoria which attended Ford's replacement in the nation's history, the instant assessment was that Ford would lead a reunited Republican Party through the post-Nixon recovery to a nearly unanimous nomination for the presidency in 1976.

Percy and other presidential hopefuls in the GOP quietly shut down their campaign operations in what seemed to be a realistic recognition of the quirk of history. The presence of Gerald Ford of Michigan apparently had closed the door to their quests for the White House.

That was before the disastrous defeat of Republicans on Nov. 5.

That was before Ford demonstrated his capacity for postponing, avoiding and reversing momentous decisions.

That was before the dimensions of the economic trauma which seem destined to haunt Ford's accidental stewardship had become clearly delineated.

Since the fall of Herbert Hoover — a lifetime for many of us, and more than a lifetime for a good many more — it was almost an axiom that an incumbent president was all but unbeatable.

That was before Lyndon B. Johnson recognized that the national anguish over Vietnam had nullified his chances for reelection. It was also before the nation got its first president who had never been elected to any office higher than congressman.

Ironically, Ford himself acknowledged on national television less than two weeks ago that an unemployment rate of 7 per cent or more would make it very difficult for him to win reelection. Then he told the nation that his budget figures for fiscal 1976 were based on projections which included an unemployment rate hovering around 8 per cent.

Assuming that most of those classified as unemployed are eligible voters, and assuming that people with complaints are likely to vote against the officials who have presided over their hardship, Gerald Ford would go into the election with a sizable handicap.

Whether or not Ford decides to run, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee has hinted that he will enter the Republican primaries. A victory, or even a close showing, by Baker in any of the early primaries, showing Ford to be vulnerable, would undoubtedly open the flood gates for a flock of GOP candidates.

If Ford should withdraw, immediate campaigns would almost surely be launched by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Nothing could suit the candidates in the middle — Baker and Percy for a couple — any better. A convention battle between Rockefeller on the party's left and Reagan on the right would be as bitter and divisive as the one in which Rockefeller attempted to wrest the nomination from Barry Goldwater in 1964.

Republicans who remember the disaster that followed that fratricidal war might wisely choose to look for a candidate somewhere between New York and California. That's where Illinois is located.

If Ford decides, as Johnson did in 1968, that he cannot be elected, Republicans will be looking for a candidate with appeal to Democrats and Independents. Ronald Reagan is not apt to draw much support from Democrats (except perhaps in the South, but that appeal could be nullified if one George Wallace turns up on the Democratic ticket). Rockefeller, despite his support from labor, would be hampered by his association with the Ford administration.

In addition to the economy, an issue which is likely to draw much concern from the nation in the next year and more is the Middle East conflict.

Though embattled now for his suggestions for shifts in American policy toward Israel, Percy could emerge as a prophet of peace if his views on the Israel-Arab conflict prevail and a settlement is attained.

The almanac

Today is Friday, Feb. 7, the 38th day of 1975 with 227 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase.

The morning star is Mars.

The evening stars are Venus, Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

American novelist Sinclair Lewis was born Feb. 7, 1885.

On this day in history:

• In 1926, the average pay for common labor in the United States was 54 cents an hour.

• In 1956, Atherine Lucy, the first Negro admitted to the University of Alabama, was expelled on grounds that she accused school officials of conspiring in riots that accompanied her court-ordered enrollment.

• In 1967, fire in a restaurant atop a 10-story building in Montgomery, Ala., took 26 lives.

• In 1973, the U. S. Senate voted to set up a seven-member committee to investigate the Watergate break-in of Democratic national headquarters.

A thought for the day: English novelist Charles Dickens said, "There are books of which the backs and covers are the best parts."

Congressional wrapup

Percy, Stevenson vote to form CIA-probe panel

From Roll Call Report

Illinois senators Charles H. Percy, Republican, and Adlai E. Stevenson III, Democrat, agreed with a heavy majority in the Senate which voted last week to establish a special Senate committee to look into possible abuses by federal intelligence agencies.

By an 82-40 vote, the Senate agreed to appoint an 11-member committee to investigate charges that the Central Intelligence Agency has spied illegally on U. S. citizens and that the FBI has kept files on members of Congress.

Following is a summary of key votes in the Senate from Jan. 23 - 29, reflecting the votes of Percy and Stevenson. During that period, there were no record votes in the House.

Senate

INTELLIGENCE: Resolution establishing committee to investigate alleged abuses by intelligence agencies, adopted 82 to 4.

Supporters criticized the lack of accountability of such agencies to the Congress. Opponents said a congressional investigation would harm the confidentiality of the agencies' operations.

Stevenson Yes

RAILROAD AID: Bill providing $275 million in emergency federal aid to avert financial collapse of eight railroads serving the Northeast and Midwest United States, passed 59-22.

Most of the money would go to the Penn Central R. R. It is intended as a stopgap to keep freight moving until the U. S. Railway Assn. created by Congress, completes reorganization of the bankrupt railroad network.

Supporters said funding would prevent a Feb. 14 shutdown of the railroads. Opponents argued that railroads should be left to compete in a free market.

Percy Yes
Stevenson Yes

NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION: Motion instructing Senate Rules Committee to establish a procedure for resolving the disputed Nov. 5 Senate election in New Hampshire, passed 58-34.

Republican Louis Wyman was the apparent winner, but a recount showed Democrat John Durkin a victor by 10 votes. A subsequent Ballot Law Commission ruling gave the election to Wyman by two votes.

The question revolved around whether the Senate should exercise its prorogative to determine qualifications of its own members, or whether New Hampshire courts should resolve the question.

The vote was on party lines, with Democrats voting for Durkin's bid, and Republicans supporting Wyman's position.

SLOW POKE
The Slowpokes of Mount Prospect will hold their "Valentine Dance" tonight at the Stevenson School, on Wolf Road just south of Palatine Road. Dancing begins with a round dance session at 5 p.m. with Helen and Bill Strainwalt.

Jim Stewart will square things up at 8:30 and dancing will continue until 11 p.m. Refreshments will be served and all area dancers are invited. For more information call 339-3326 or 827-4300.

RAND RAMBLERS
All area dancers are invited to join the Rand Ramblers Saturday night at the Boy Scouts of America Building, 1622 Rand Rd., Arlington Heights, beginning at 8 p.m.

Dei Trust of Ottumwa, Iowa, will be the guest caller and Harv and Marge Teitzels will call the round throughout the evening. For more information call 363-1915 or 229-4413.

BUCKS AND DOES
The Bucks and Does Square Dance Club invite all area dancers to join them Saturday 8 p.m. at Holmes Junior High School, 1900 W. Longmoot, Mount Prospect, for their "Mardi Gras" dance. To enhance the atmosphere, dancers are asked to wear masks for this dance. Paul (Foggy) Thompson will call the squares and Lee Simpson and Shirley Kenik will cue the rounds.

A reminder that March 8 the Bucks and Does will be dancing to the "Schillelsh Suite" with two rounds of continuous dancing at Holmes Junior High, Mount Prospect. The occasion will feature three square dance callers, Paul (Foggy) Thompson, Jim Stewart and Beryl Main. There will be two round dance couples, including Lee Simpson and Shirley Kenik, and Gerry and May Hoffers.

This is a ticket dance with advance tickets costing $3.50 per couple and at the door price will be $4. For more information, call 229-2392.

SQUARE WHEELS
The Square Wheels Anniversary Dance will be held Saturday, Feb. 15 at the MacArthur Junior High School, southwest corner of Palatine and Schoenbeck roads, Prospect Heights, from 8 to 11 p.m.

Paul (Foggy) Thompson will be calling the squares and Lee and Shirley cueing the rounds. All area square dancers are welcome. Refreshments will be served. For more information call 263-8823.

'Khan!' uniformly offensive

NEW YORK — "Khan" is chop phooey. "Khan" — in case you have not been watching all the hyped promos on CBS — is the network's new detective thriller set in San Francisco. It premieres Friday night. "Khan!" also is the second bald private eye on CBS. The other is "Kojak."

Khan, who is not related to Ghengis or Kubla, is a modern-day Charlie Chan. In fact, he's such a modern-day Charlie that a group of Chinese in San Francisco — the Chinese Media Committee — have contended that Khan is offensive to Sino-Americans.

The group is wrong. "Khan!" is offensive to everyone. Unless the scripts and the acting improve, CBS might as well send Khan to his ancestors.

IN THE OPENING show, Khan, played by Khig Dilegh, clears a professional football player who is accused of clubbing his girlfriend to death with a statue. The ballplayer, a black quarterback, was framed by one of his coaches who was trying to keep him out of a championship game. The coach was working for professional gamblers.

Now, this plot is not the worst in the history of television or the most hackneyed. Certainly, the use of theme or pro ball allows the network to extend the football season. But it seems evident that Khan will never rise above mediocrity, especially since the level of acting never reaches the quality of the plot.

To wit: Khig Dilegh, who used to play the villain Wa Fat in "Hawaii Five-O," walks through his role like a windup Buddha doll suffering from terminal constipation. In fact, Dilegh recites his lines like a telegram.

OTHERS IN THE show suffer from the same problems. Irene Yeh-Ling Sun plays Khan's No. 1 and only daughter, Anna, a doctoral candidate in criminology. Miss Sun is attractive and icy, but suffers from the same malady that afflicts Khan.

Evan Kim, Khan's No. 1 and only son, is designated by CBS to be "college-educated." There must be a fear around CBS that Kim must be a college man because all Occidentals think Chinese work in laundries and use abacuses. The Win at bridge

Keep an entry to your hand

South wasted no time at all in finding a way to lose his contract. He won the first trick with the ace of diamonds, cashed three high trumps in order to pull the opponents' teeth and led a spade toward dummy.

West played low and dummy's queen held the trick. Now South led a club to his king. West plopped the ace on it and led a second diamond. After this bit of unpleasantness South had no way to avoid the loss of a spade and a diamond and two clubs.

The spade and two clubs had to be lost on any line of play. The diamond was lost because South drew trumps a trifle too soon.

It was all right for South to play out one high trump, but then he should have led that spade. West would still duck, but then South would be able to get back to his hand by leading dummy's last trump. He would then pull the defenders' last trump and lead a second spade. This would establish dummy's king of spades while dummy still held the king of diamonds.

trouble with Kim is that he is filled with starch and waiting to be pressed.

The only interesting group left is the supporting cast, which is much better than the primary characters. Chu Gula-ger is workmanlike as the coach who tries to frame the quarterback. John Ireland adds a touch of class as the football team's impotent head coach.

And Victor Buono is his old delightful, villainous self as the gambling czar. He oozes evil. The only unfortunate thing about his performance was that he was saddled with terrible lines. "Ed, don't be a twit," says Buono.

Apprentices learn first-hand about theater

by BOB GALLAS

A group of High School Dist. 214 students are "in the dark" when it comes to professional theater.

They are part of a special theater apprentice program for district students coordinated by Arlington High School in cooperation with Arlington Park Theatre. In return for class credit, the students learn about professional theater by being part of the silent backstage army that often operates in the dark, changing sets, moving props and guiding actors to a precise spot on a dark stage between scenes.

"We feel they should get more out of it than just cleaning toilets," said Dave Morrison, stage manager at Arlington Park, who supervises about 20 high school apprentices at the theater. "We want them to have a working knowledge of the professional theater. We turn them over to the jobs that need to be done."

THE APPRENTICES do get delegated to menial tasks, such as keeping restrooms clean, washing dishes and making gelatin if the play calls for it. Because of union restrictions, the students can't get involved in set construction. But they do learn how to paint or upholster, while holding down jobs during a run of a show that range from laying out costumes for the actors to making sure props are in their assigned places.

Though not paid, the students get a half-hour credit for working 75 hours at the theater, one credit for 150 hours. Often, the time goes by in a hurry.

"During production week, you sometimes put in over 100 hours," said Scott Blizzard, an Arlington sophomore in his first year as an apprentice. Blizzard said he took the course because it sounded like "fun." Though he found out quickly it wasn't all fun, he was soon hooked on the excitement of professional theater.

THE STUDENTS, almost all of whom had no real interest in theater before, admit to a special pride in changing sets. In complicated productions, like the current production, "13 Rue de l'Amour," the entire changes are choreographed because there is so much movement, usually in total darkness.

The program also gives the students a new insight into the theater.

"They work closely with the performers and find out that actors are not just glamorous figures, but hard-working people with likes and dislikes," said Morrison.

Individual assignments during a show are changed weekly, to give everybody a chance to try something different. Students are responsible on the last day of their assignment for training their successors.

The program, while just a start in the training needed for a career in technical theater, has prompted many graduates to go on to college and major in drama. One former apprentice is currently stage production manager for the Broadway show "Good News," said Lyvonne Trad, Arlington High teacher, who supervises the program.

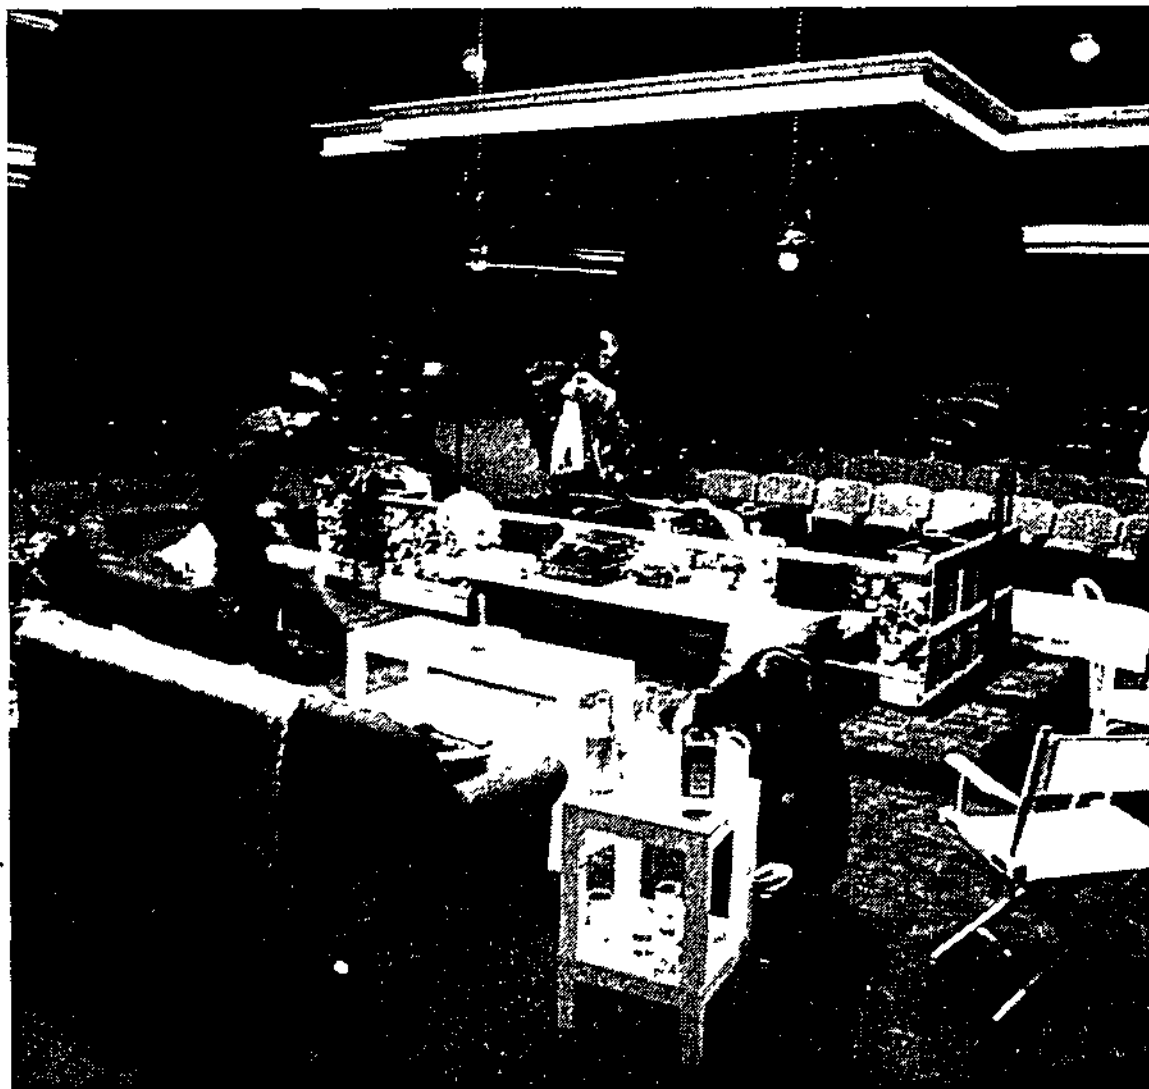

WHILE LEARNING and receiving class credit, the students also enjoy an after school job that allows them to meet many Hollywood actors, from Burt Reynolds and James Farentino to Leslie Caron and Lois Nettleton. The students lovingly refer to many actors by their first names and watch for them to appear on television.

Though their supervisors have nothing but praise for the novice stage hands, the students have made a few mistakes in the learning process that have caused a tense moment or two.

One scene called for a letter which was forgotten, but luckily discovered in the nick of time and slipped into place, recalled Luisa Valdes, an apprentice.

Another play starring Imogene Coca called for a suitcase on stage to be packed by Miss Coca. "It wasn't put out, so Miss Coca had to use a bedspread instead," said Miss Valdes.

"Was she mad!"

THESE PERFORMERS always play to empty houses at the Arlington Park Theatre, but are as much a part of the performance as the actors. Here, students who are part of the theater apprentice program at Arlington High School prepare the stage for a recent production. The students work backstage for credit and experience.

"CLOWNS," A BALLET being performed by the City Center Joffrey Ballet, may surprise those who think ballet is all "Swan Lake." The piece is choreographed by Gerald Arpino to a 12-tone score and is one of a variety of numbers in the Joffrey's repertory. The Joffrey is at the Auditorium Theatre through February 16.

In Chicago they love the Joffrey Ballet

by LYNN ASINOF

Chicago loves the City Center Joffrey Ballet.

People who are intimidated by tutus and fouettes are fascinated by the company that can dance to anything from a Strauss waltz to the Beach Boys. The company may not always dance it well, but that doesn't seem to bother the audience.

The Joffrey is the only ballet company that can sustain a two-week winter run in the Loop and return for a third week at Ravinia in the summer. And Chicago's love affair with the Joffrey was revived again this week, when the company settled in for a two-week romp through its repertory.

The Joffrey's strength is in the diversity of its program rather than the quality of its dancing. Most programs consist of three or four short ballets which vary in flavor from the romantic and the amusing to the somber and the off-beat.

"DEUCE COUPE II," a dance collage set to Beach Boys music, seems a far cry from "Kettentanz," a lively tribute to the Viennese waltz, but both appear on the same program. There are also "N.Y. Export, Op. Jazz," a piece reminiscent of the 1930s; "The Green Table," a "danse macabre" dealing with war; and "Viva Vivaldi!" a sprightly romp through Vivaldi's music.

For this reason, the Joffrey can be a marvelous introduction to the world of dance. Persons who think ballet is all "Swan Lake" will find the Joffrey a rude awakening.

The variety of the program, however, is almost equalled by the inconsistency of the dancing. The company runs hot and cold, often just hinting at the magic that can capture an audience when the dancer and the dance become one.

AT TUESDAY night's performance, most of the performers seemed to forget that dancing is a matter of the soul. The women, known for their cool, leggy look, rarely smiled. They resembled little dancing machines, only they often danced on wobbly legs and failed to hold their positions.

An exception was Francesca Cirkle, who added sparkle to "Kettentanz" with both her technical ability and the warmth she generated.

Ann Marie DeAngelo, however, was the highlight of the evening in Monotones II, a stark pas de trois choreographed by Frederick Ashton. Miss DeAngelo provided strength and grace throughout the short piece which wove the dancers' bodies together with absurd and exaggerated movements.

DEUCE COUPE II was a confusing but interesting trip back through the Beach Boys era. Although ballet does not mix well with rock music, the combination seemed to stimulate the dancers, producing some of the most lively dancing of the evening.

The Joffrey will be performing through the evening of Feb. 16 at the Auditorium Theatre.

Antiques dealer can be a collector's best friend

by FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

If you're an antiques collector, take a dealer to lunch. It could prove a wise investment.

That's the advice of the "emperor" of American antiques shows, Russell Carrell, who manages 21 indoor shows and eight outdoor shows a year in the East and Midwest. He is a dealer himself, in Salisbury, Conn., so he knows whereof he speaks.

"Make friends of dealers if you can," he said during a breather at his Winter Antiques Show, a multimillion dollar extravaganza that is the largest in his annual schedule. "They're helpful. They'll find things for you, be your eyes and ears. You should choose your dealer like you'd choose your doctor."

"You're better off in the hands of some one who understands your point of view and your finances. Some people have such faith in their dealers that they leave a certain sum with them each year so that the dealer can make purchases at his own discretion."

ALTHOUGH DEALERS with shops still are in the majority as exhibitors at Carrell's antiques shows, there has been a trend toward exhibitors who do business only on the show circuit. They often are people with jobs who have antiques as a hobby and decided to turn it into a secondary source of income.

"Once bitten, though, a great many of these moonlighters become full-time dealers," Carrell continued. "This business has proved to be good business even in bad times. The good things sell because people are collecting as an investment. Quality antiques are coming onto the market in unprecedented quantities these days."

Carrell's indoor shows are elegant exhibitions which raise money — as much as $75,000 at the Winter Antiques Show at New York's 7th Regiment Armory — for sponsoring charities through rental of booth space. These shows are increasingly dominated by American folk art and historical artifacts. The less formal outdoor or flea-market shows, at which station wagon tailgates often serve as display counters, tend to feature "contemporary" antiques.

"THOSE ARE 'antiques' of the '30s,

'40s, '50s and '60s," Carrell said without a trace of the disdain that might be expected from a dealer specializing in 18th and early 19th Century Americana. "Teddy bears are a big item today, especially the German makes of the '20s and '30s or any that show some sign of wear. They bring about $50. Shirley Temple cereal sets are a very big item, too."

Whether you're interested in $50 Teddies or in $90,000 sets of early 19th Century Chinese porcelain figurines that are featured at the Winter Antiques Show, Carrell gives this advice about buying antiques at shows:

- Don't try to see everything at a show. Take your time. What you don't see you won't know about anyway.
- Make several visits so you can evaluate what you want. Everyone has his own economic level and shouldn't go beyond it.

- If you feel impulsively that you must buy on first sight, buy. The item may be gone the next time you visit.

- Buy things you can use daily, not things just to put on a shelf. Practical antiques are more fun.

- As a general rule, don't bargain unless you are buying several items. If anything is good, the dealer doesn't have to sell cheaper.

- Collect things of interest in your home locality, such as items made in the area. It adds to the value of a collection locally.

Carrell himself collects iron frogs because they were made by iron mongers in his Connecticut area with metal left over at the end of the day. He uses them as doorstops and hearth ornaments. Some are mold-made, others were fashioned free style.

CARRELL SAID the marketing of antiques is becoming increasingly sophisticated. Antique centers — economical clusters of shops usually under one roof — are springing up like mushrooms. Some of the newer shops and antique shows combine antiques with craft items.

"I don't go for that," Carrell said. "You don't attract either the antiques or the crafts crowd. Crafts have their own audience and should be kept separate."

Playback

Bob Dylan's new album reflects his maturity

Bob Dylan's new album, "Blood On The Tracks" (Columbia records), is not the master's masterpiece, but it is some of the best stuff he's done since 1969's "Nashville Skyline."

The Dylan of the '70s is an older, more mature Dylan. By this I mean he has lived more and thus has more personal experiences to relate. It seems natural that his albums of the '70s are filled with his experiences — usually dealing with man-woman relationships as does most of "Blood On The Tracks."

Dylan's angry-young-man phase, during which he came to represent the discontent and rage of a whole generation of Americans, is over. Dylan has moved on. The best example of this is one of the songs in the new album. It's called "Idiot Wind," and in it Dylan lashes out at the hypocrisy of following fashion. But the song, whose chorus lingers in the mind more than any other on the album, doesn't match the fire of the earlier Dylan.

THE ALBUM opens with one of its prettiest songs, "Tangled Up In Blue." It's about love — careless, short and free, except for the memories. Dylan uses his raspy, jump style vocals here, although he chooses a smoother style for "If You See Her, Say Hello," a song with a very similar theme.

Several of the songs are fairly good poetry. They include "Simple Twist of Fate" and "Shelter From the Storm," which is another of the album's good songs.

Musically, the album reminds me very much of the "John Wesley Harding" album of 1968. The rather sparse accompaniment consists of Tony Brown on bass, Buddy Cage on steel guitar, Paul Griffin on organ (he's outstanding on several cuts) and Eric Weissberg and Deliverance providing a bluegrass background. The bluegrass feel is particularly enjoyable on the traditionally bluesy "Meet Me In The Morning." Another song heavily in the blues format is "Buckets of Rain."

MY FAVORITES are "Bucket of Rain," "Tangled Up In Blue" and the lengthy narrative song, "Lily, Rosemary and the Jack of Hearts." "Jack of Hearts" is an 8½-minute tale of the Old West, complete with roughish hero, bank robbery and saloon showdown. The beat is fast and Griffin's organ is great. To tell the tale, Dylan relies on one of his greatest techniques — superb compression of story, being able to paint images and characters in the listener's mind with just a few phrases. Your mind is forced to contribute to evoke the full enjoyment of the song.

ANOTHER FINE album can only be found in your record stores with a plain green shrinkwrap over the front cover. It's "Country Life" (Atco records), the fourth and best Roxy Music album.

The green shrinkwrap is a censorship move because the cover features two scantily clad ladies — but then the last Roxy album featured a former Playboy bunny and the one before that had the girl in blue. Such censorship is silly anyway, as nearly all albums are sold because of the music or reputation of the musicians, not the cover.

In the case of Roxy Music, their sound is one of the most innovative today. The group skillfully blends the traditional '60s rock style (booming sax for example) with the '70s synthesizer. The opening "The Thrill of It All" is typical and would make a great single because of its pulsing beat and wildly dancing strings.

ALL THE SONGS are written or co-written by lead singer Bryan Ferry, who has had two fine solo albums in the past year also. Both in his lyrics and individualistic vocal approach, Ferry brings a lot of humor to rock music. Another good example is "All I Want Is You," which also features a blistering, slashing guitar.

A very unusual song is "Bitter-Sweet," which with its partially cabaret style and part-German lyrics reminds me a lot of Marlene Dietrich. There also is a rock hymn of sorts, called "Triptych;" "Casanova," a slap-tribute to a guy on the downside; the classical-influenced "A Really Good Time;" and "Prairie Rose," a heavy guitar salute to Texas.

Roxy Music is currently on tour and scheduled to appear Feb. 23 in Chicago.

Drug morals unclear in novel for teenagers

"I CAN STOP ANY TIME I WANT"
BY JAMES TRIVERS
Prentice-Hall Inc., $5.95

The moral to stay clean and clear of drugs, sex and alcohol is the focus of James Trivers' first novel for teenagers, "I Can Stop Any Time I Want." But he fails to produce solid evidence. The reader is left unconvinced that anything was actually accomplished or gained.

Trivers recounts the activities of 17-year-old Graham Samson, a dope dealer who can't seem to find his way to the clean life.

Graham leads the stereotyped life of the teen dope-dealer. He curses and behaves like the hard-core dropout bored with the world, his parents and school. Nothing is good except those moments when he is high.

Graham and his friend Tortoise finally get busted by the police. The usual traumas take place with Graham's parents disowning him and forcing him onto the clean life with a haircut and probation restrictions.

TORTOISE, THE rich friend, gets his father's lawyer to buy his freedom and heads off to boarding school with a reprimand. Graham must stay behind on probation with an 11 p.m. curfew, loss of his driver's license and no booze or drugs.

Graham's parents are as stereotyped as their son. They show no sympathy for him nor do they try to talk to him and understand why he uses and deals drugs.

Again Graham's parole officer is the stereotype "fuzz" who fails to probe into the reasons why Graham sold and used drugs. He does not help Graham find other activities to divert his attentions from drugs and alcohol. He just tells him to keep up the improvement and that he will see him in a month.

GRAHAM CONTINUES to plod through guilt feelings, show-off antics and finally undergoes a scary experience which convinces him to go straight — and he seems to be making it only to fall again. But Graham reasons, "I can stop any time I want."

The book appears geared to junior high school level in reading ability. However, the language and activities should be reserved for high school. Trivers' use of street language occasionally backfires. He gets so caught up in descriptions that sometimes the train of thought is lost.

While students in grades 7-8 might relate to the book, the experiences encountered, are ones that high school students would be most familiar with. Regardless, the moral is lost in the innovative writing.

"YOU CAN PROFIT FROM A MONETARY CRISIS"
BY HARRY BROWNE
Bantam Books, $2.25

Learning how to cope with depression can be profitable, says author Harry Browne. In the updated, paperback version of "You Can Profit from a Monetary Crisis," Browne offers an escape route for the individual investor who wants to hedge against runaway inflation and depression.

A depression occurs when most people have to reduce their standard of living, Browne says. He believes the U.S. is experiencing the first stage of a depression that will make financial survival more difficult in years to come. What's more, government intervention and outside spending programs will magnify the problem.

Cashing in on the troubled financial situation will mean a turnaround for the individual who's banked heavily on traditional investments. For starters, take a critical look at stocks, mutual funds, real estate investments and savings accounts. Weigh the traditional "safe" bets against their limited capacity to offset the sinking value of the dollar. Browne views investment in silver, gold and gold-backed foreign currencies as the only sure investments.

THERE MAY BE times when gold and silver stashed in a safe place will fail to offer sufficient protection from a monetary crisis, Browne warns. He advises the investor to chuck shaky holdings and expensive trappings as unused second homes, adding that a well-provisioned retreat should be considered. A secluded hideaway would enable an individual to sit out the chaos that would follow a complete breakdown of the dollar, Browne said.

Despite Browne's "I told you so" attitude — he forecast the dollar devaluation and rising gold prices — the self-taught investment specialist does offer practical advice about dealings with foreign bankers, how to raise cash quickly, how to break into commodity investment and how to support yourself in an uncertain economy. Most important for the fledgling investor is the author's warning to understand the risks as well as potential profits that may be encountered.

'Ring Round the Moon'

Friends of Schaumburg Township Library is staging Jean Anouilh's romantic comedy, "Ring Round the Moon," tonight, Saturday and again next weekend, Feb. 14 and 15, in the meeting room of the Schaumburg Township Library, 32 Library Lane. Curtain is 8:30 for all performances. Adults, $2.50; students, $1.50. Tickets, 529-1732.

M & S stages drama

"I Never Sang for My Father" is being staged by Masque and Staff of Elk Grove Village at Dempster Junior High School in Mount Prospect tonight, Saturday and again next weekend, Feb. 14 and 15. Curtain is 8:30 p.m. for all performances. Adults, $3; students, $1.50. Tickets, 437-0679.

Harper piano concert

Allison Nelson, an Australian-born pianist, will present a concert at Harper College Tuesday, 8 p.m., in Room P203.

Admission is $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for students. The concert is free to Harper students and staff showing an ID card.

At the present Miss Nelson is artist-in-residence at the University of Tennessee at Martin, where she was recently honored by being selected as one of the two distinguished professors on campus. She has also been recognized for the year 1974-75 as one of the Outstanding Educators of America.

Palatine Band concert

The Palatine Band will present a concert Sunday, 7:30 p.m., at Hoffman Estates High School.

Conducted by Arthur Katterjohn, the 60-piece community orchestra will perform such selections as "Jubilation" and "Centennial Fanfare March." The adult organization is sponsored by the Village of Palatine and Palatine Park District.

A donation of $1.50 will be asked at the door. Children and senior citizens are invited to attend at no charge.

Guild Players announces cast of 'Mousetrap'

Guild Players has announced cast members for Agatha Christie's mystery play, "The Mousetrap," being presented Feb. 21, 22 and 23 and March 1 at Hoffman Estates Barn Theatre, 630 W. Higgins Rd.

Playing the young owners of an old British manor, turned guest house, are Sandy Reimann, Schaumburg, and Tim Fielding, Palatine, as Molly and Giles Ralston.

Guests in the house are Vince Viverito, Hoffman Estates, as Christopher Wren; Darlene Wilcox, Hanover Park, Miss Caswell; Iris Tompkins, Lombard, Mrs. Boyle; Helmut Lechner, Barrington, Mr. Paravieini; Bob Moriarty, Hoffman Estates, Major Metcalf; and Dale Morris, Bensenville, Detective Sgt. Trotter.

DIRECTOR is Bill Schumacher of Elgin. Helping in the production are Iris Tompkins as production manager and assistant stage manager, and Ann Tillett as stage manager.

Ticket and further information may be obtained from Marvin and Irene Kaufman, 885-3897.

Backstage jobs are open to anyone interested in community theater. No experience is necessary. Help is needed in set construction, painting, carpentry, lighting, props, furniture, make-up, posters and publicity. Interested persons may call 882-7498 or 885-3897.

PUTTING THEIR STAMP of approval on the book and wrapping paper currently being sold by Countryside Committee of the Women's Association to raise funds for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra are from left, Mrs.

Pearl Schaefer and Mrs. Betty Doemland, both of Des Plaines, and Mrs. Rae Inman and Mrs. Jan Impey, both of Arlington Heights.

Women raise money for Chicago Symphony

Members of the Countryside Committee of the Chicago Symphony Women's Association, are now engaged in several fund-raising projects for the orchestra, following their recent meeting at Inverness Golf Club.

Currently on sale by the women's organization are notepaper, Christmas cards, wrapping paper (an original score by Theodore Thomas), a tote bag and a book about the Chicago Symphony Orchestra with text by Thomas Willis and photographs by Robert Lightfoot.

Prices range from $1.65 for a box of 10 notepapers to $35 for 100 Christmas cards. The book and tote bag are $10.50 apiece.

Money from the sale of all items will go to the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

"All donations would be greatly appreciated and, of course, are tax deductible," said chairman Mrs. Gilbert B. McIntosh of Palatine.

"IN RETURN FOR contributing to our great symphony, one receives the news letters pertaining to the orchestra and the youth concerts which are sponsored by the Women's Association. Also, all programs of the popular concerts and chamber music concerts are sent to contributors and one is invited to attend an open rehearsal.

"Most important, of course, is that Chicago can continue to have one of the greatest orchestras in the world today."

Further information concerning the Women's Association or any of the items on sale is available through Mrs. McIntosh, 359-0454.

Americana theme in choral society Feb. 16 concert

"Nostalgia — Americana" is the theme for the Sunday, Feb. 16, performance by Northwest Choral Society at Christ Church of Des Plaines, Cora and Henry streets.

Music by Irving Berlin, George M. Cohan, William Billings and Ervin Dunham will be sung by the group, which is directed by James C. Thunder Jr.

One of the serious numbers to be featured is "Markham Trilogy," three songs composed by Ervin Dunham using the poetry of Edwin Markham, a largely self-educated American poet who championed the common man. The chorus also will perform "A Cry for Freedom," with music by William Billings, which takes the listener on a journey through the American Revolution.

Tickets for the 3:30 p.m. concert are $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for senior citizens and students. Information, 696-4485.

Night out

Theater made less expensive

by GENIE CAMPBELL

New concepts in theater packages being offered by two Chicago area theaters do indicate that full houses are still greatly appreciated.

To make it somewhat less expensive for people to attend a play, both the IVANHOE and FORUM THEATRES are making available subscription series at discount prices. Of course, you do have to enjoy the theater and frequent it regularly. But if you do, there are ways to trim ticket prices.

JOHN McGIVER, GODFREY CAMBRIDGE and GEORGE MAHARIS will star at the Forum Theater in a new series of plays beginning next month. Subscribers will receive a 15 per cent discount when they purchase tickets to three or more plays. The Forum also offers the same discount if 10 tickets are purchased within a five-month period.

John McGiver will star March 4-30 in "ENTER A FREE MAN," a comedy about a middle-aged inventor who has spent most of his years chasing one illusion after another.

Next on the stage is Godfrey Cambridge, April 1-27, in a farce about three old men, three lovely girls, one young man and a very wise fool. It's entitled "THE THREE CUCKOLDS."

George Maharis will be featured April 29-June 1 in "STEAMBATII," a meaningful comedy that turns the steamboat into a waiting room between this world and the next.

The Forum also offers half-priced previews. Take advantage of lower prices on March 4 and 5, and also April 1, 2, 29 and 30.

The Forum's current production, "The Good Doctor," has been held over through March 2. It's a delightful show, one I feel warrants paying the full price.

The Ivanhoe recently initiated its PLAYERS CLUB. For a $25 membership fee, participants receive an across-the-board 25 per cent reduction in ticket prices at the theater. In addition, when members dine in the Ivanhoe Restaurant before or after the shows, they will receive a 50 per cent discount on theater tickets.

Members will be guaranteed up to eight tickets per play for six plays, with no limitations as to performances or weeks during the run of the play. And members are guaranteed six plays whether it be in this season or subsequent seasons. You don't have to attend a play you have no desire to see.

"SUMMER," a comedy-drama exposing the disappointments of middle age, is currently on stage at the Ivanhoe.

Valentine's Day is approaching. In honor of cupid's holiday JOHN GARY will present two shows next Friday at the PHEASANT RUN NIGHTCLUB in St. Charles. Dinner is available at the early show.

INDIAN LAKES COUNTRY CLUB is planning a dance on Valentine's Day with music provided by DENNIS ROBY AND THE UPPER CLASS. Festivities begin at 8 p.m. in the Thunderbird Room. There is no cover or admission charge.

New shows opening this week include BARBI BENTON in the BLUE MAX of the HYATT REGENCY O'HARE beginning Monday. Appearing with Miss Benton will be comedian JAY LENO. The two will perform two shows nightly through Feb. 22.

CONNIE and JERRY "K" open Tuesday in THE GREENHOUSE LOUNGE, Palatine, for an extended engagement. Connie sings and her husband accompanies her on the piano. Hot hors d'oeuvres and reduced drink prices are offered in the lounge Tuesday through Friday, 4 to 6 p.m.

CHUCK MASNY is currently entertaining Friday and Saturday nights at the MAITRE 'D RESTAURANT in Elk Grove Village. Masny is featured on the organ and vibraphone.

Are you a frustrated belly dancer with no place to perform? ALEXANDER'S RESTAURANT, Mount Prospect, features amateur belly dancing every Wednesday beginning at 9:30 p.m. Perhaps you just want to go and watch.

Last curtain for 'Company'

Music On Stage's production of "Company" will have its final two performances tonight and Saturday night at the Wheeling-Northbrook Holiday Inn at Milwaukee Avenue and Winkelman Road. Curtain goes up at 8:30 p.m.

Tickets may be reserved by calling 566-4720 or 253-6316. Students and senior citizens may attend for $2.50 tonight. Regular ticket price is $3.50 with special discounts for groups of 25 or more persons.

LUMS FOR DINNER

Lums is a steak place

Lums is a hamburger place

Lums is a dessert place

Lums is a seafood place

Lums is a sandwich place

Lums is an everything place

The thing that's so different about LUMS is that it's really different. 'Cause you are—and so are your tastes. Sometimes you just don't know what you want to eat until you sit down, look at the menu, and watch the food being served to others. So at Lums, we've tried to anticipate your every want. Practically everything from soup to nuts...even beer in most LUMS. And everything priced with an eye to your budget. Next time you're heading out for dinner with the family, and you all want something different, come to LUMS. Like our famous song says, "LUMS will wait on you and give you more, more, more!"

Kennessey's is one of 31 restaurants and food shops participating in this year's ethnic dining coupon book of the International Visitors Center.

Visitors Center offers bargain on ethnic dining

An ethnic dining coupon book offering one dinner free if two are ordered, complimentary specialty of the house, or discount on a meal purchased at 21 different restaurants and food shops in the Chicago area, recently went on sale for 1978.

The coupon book, valid for the entire year, is an annual fund-raising event of the International Visitors Center, a non-profit organization that extends personal diplomacy to foreign visitors during their stay in Chicago.

These visitors are sponsored either by the State Department or resident international students attending college or universities in the Chicago area.

The ethnic dining coupon book supports activities planned by the center. Local restaurants included in this year's book are Blimbo's at the corner of Rand and Dundee roads, Palatine, and Kennessey's at Kennessey International in Countryside Court, Mount Prospect.

Cost of the book is $10. To order, diners may phone 255-0628 after 6 p.m. or send a check for $10 to International Visitors Center, 116 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, 60603.

Fiber buffs will exhibit, demonstrate their crafts

Members of the Fiber Guild-Fiber Freaks of Countryside Art Center are exhibiting some of their work today and Saturday as part of the grand opening festivities of Z's Junction, a new craft gallery in Countryside Court, Mount Prospect.

Several members will also be demonstrating spinning and weaving techniques Saturday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Glenn Faloon will show how to spin wool and then dye it using natural dyes. Emily Monroe will present a weaving demonstration using her four-harness table loom.

Z's Junction will specialize in crafts and currently has on exhibit wooden toys, Indian jewelry, ceramics and pottery.

The Fiber Guild-Fiber Freaks' next meeting is Feb. 27 at the gallery, 414 N. Vail in Arlington Heights. Guest speaker will be Emily Monroe who will talk about liturgical weaving.

THE STUDY OF WOMEN in films will be the slide/lecture feature when Chicago Women in Publishing meet Feb. 19 in the Loop YWCA, 37 S. Wabash.

Joyce S. Schragger, part-time lecturer

In American History and co-author of the to-be-published book, "The Big Tease: The Image of Women in Film," will comment on and visually illustrate the treatment of women on the screen. Primary focus will be on the films of the 1930s and 1940s when women were portrayed as independent career people who succumbed to the standard role when the right man entered the picture.

A donation of $1 for CWIP members and $2 for non-members will be requested at the door.

Parents group seeks card design

Parents Association of Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Barrington, is seeking original Christmas card designs for its 1978 Christmas cards, to be donated by the artists.

Artists interested in submitting designs should send them to Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Box 412, Barrington, Ill. 60010, by Monday, March 31. The winning artists will receive as many cards as they need for their personal use.

There are some requirements, according to Harriet Swanson, Parents Association president. These are:

- All entries must be original designs.
- Two types of cards are needed: religious and non-religious.
- Artist may submit two designs for each type of card.
- All entries must be the actual size of the card, 5 by 7 inches.

- Maximum number of colors to be used is three.
- A border is preferred.

The artist may suggest a verse, but final decision will be made by the parents group.

Mrs. Swanson may be contacted for further information at 358-5429.

Theater named after dancer

The North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, has named its newly renovated theater for the famed dancer-choreographer, Agnes deMille, an originator of the school and a member of its advisory board. The theater opened this week with a dance performance featuring Miss deMille's "Three Virgins and a Devil."

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Is it a bruise or a clot?

How long can a bruise produce clots? Wouldn't medicine to reduce the clots cause them to travel?

I was kicked by a horse on the outside of the thigh 20 months ago. At the time there was a large bruise. It appeared to form rivers that ran out from the main bruise and extra bruised areas appeared on my leg and on the inside of the knee.

Within a week I had severe headaches that I couldn't attribute to tension or sinus. There was swelling on the side of the head when the headache occurred. One day I awakened with one side of my face swollen and aching dreadfully and retired with the other side affected.

The site of the bruise has flattened as if the muscles were gone. Why? Yet, I am very active and climb many hills, and that leg isn't any weaker than the other.

At the site of the kick there are lumps I can feel. I have a bruise on my other leg from bumping into the pickup tailgate, and it, too, has a little lump almost dead center. Are these lumps clots? Will they disappear?

A bruise and a clot are not the same thing. I'm sure in the wake of former President Nixon's problems everyone with a bruise is going to be more conscious of the problem. A bruise results from a tear in the wall of the blood vessels that allows blood to leak out of the vessel into the surrounding tissues.

If you get hit or kicked by a horse the injured blood vessels literally leak blood. The smallest blood vessels break because they have the thinnest walls and are more easily broken than the larger thick-walled veins.

The blood that leaks out can clot, but since it is outside of a vein it is not going to go anywhere. At least it won't dislodge and travel with the circulation. If the leak is in a place where the tissues are loose, as under the skin, a lot of blood can accumulate before the leaked blood creates enough pressure to close the small blood vessels.

Of course, if the injury is to a large vein, in addition to the leak of blood that causes the bruise, a clot can form at the site of injury of the vein. This clot in a larger vein can be dislodged and travel in the circulation to the heart and lungs.

AS THE LEAKED blood is gradually reabsorbed by the body, it may cause scarring. The blood accumulation acts much like an injury and it is possible to have damage to the muscle that would cause the appearance of lost muscle you describe. The elimination of the last part of the clot and formation of the scar is probably responsible for the knots you are describing.

To prevent further changes large clots in some location are sometimes removed surgically. Of course this is not done if there is a bleeding tendency and each case is different.

The length of time it takes to eliminate the leaked blood or external clot depends a lot on its size and location.

I doubt your headache had any relation to the bruise at all. The swelling on one side at night and on the other side at the end of the day probably was related to the difference in your head position while sleeping and while being up and about.

Baby foods 'unnecessary,' research report contends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Baby foods, on which Americans spend millions every year, are unnecessary and may result in overfeeding infants and create lifelong bad eating habits, a U.S. report contends.

The report, by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, was released along with a petition from 58 congressmen urging the Food and Drug Administration to require ingredients be listed by percentage on the labels of baby food.

The study said baby foods often contain unnecessary ingredients such as sugar and starch, as well as salt, spices and sodium nitrite — a preservative found in bacon and other cured meats suspected of being a potential cause of cancer.

Human milk or a milk substitute can support normal infant growth for four to six months, the study said, and then mashed table food can be used.

"Inexpensive food grinders will prepare food in a form acceptable to infants. In other words, strained baby foods are unnecessary products. Commercial baby foods are more expensive per unit calorie than most milks and formulas so their use is disadvantageous from an economic as well as from a physiological standpoint," the study said.

GERBER PRODUCTS of Fremont, Mich., a leading manufacturer of baby foods, said the study "does not merit a formal response."

"The center just doesn't have the nutritional qualifications and background to make such statements," a Gerber spokesman said, adding that "if people continue to buy our baby foods, we must be doing something right."

The center is a nonprofit research group financed by contributions. Its research has centered primarily in two areas — the food industry and energy policy and production.

Some nutritionists also worry that premature feeding of solid foods — promoted in baby food ads — can lead to obesity, the report said.

Mid-Suburban wrestling meet at Elk Grove

Wide-open atmosphere for finals

by KEITH REINHARD
Wrestling Editor

Up for grabs.

That's about the most appropriate description for the fifth annual Mid-Suburban League wrestling tournament scheduled to get underway at Elk Grove tonight. The action will build to a frenzied and dramatic climax by Saturday night some time after 7:30.

There are 13 squads and well over 150 grapplers entered in the competition and any one of six teams and any 12 of perhaps 40 or more individuals are given an earnest shot at championship laurels.

The wide-open atmosphere is in sharp contrast to recent years when powerful Hersey contingents rolled expectantly to the title. Since the conference meet was added to the MSJL mat schedule for the 1970-71 season the Huskies have never been removed from the overall championship picture.

They aren't out of it this year either, although they are given no better a chance at journey laurels than Arlington, Buffalo Grove, Elk Grove, Rolling Meadows or Schaumburg.

Hersey's firm grip on the overall wrestling title was in fact first budged last year at this time when the Saxons came from obscurity to lay claim to the conference meet crown and the Grenadiers moved in to snare runner-up honors. That relegated coach Rick Mann's unbeaten dual meet squad to only a half share of the overall prize — along with Elk Grove.

Individually, the competition is even keener. All 13 schools have at least a contender or two. And with the exception of possibly two or three super performers with perfect or near perfect records in arm and downstate experience under their belts, no one has a sure path to success this weekend.

The meet begins with preliminaries at 6:00 tonight. The semifinals will be conducted at session two starting at noon Saturday and the championship session kicks off at 6 p.m. tomorrow. Here's a brief rundown of what each weight will have to offer:

John Gross

Terry Ruddy

98 Pounds — Bison Terry McCann (22-4), Card Steve Scott (18-3), Darcy Rice of Hoffman Estates (16-2) and Saxon Mark Zeller (18-4) are good bets to make it to the semis. After that anything goes.

105 Pounds — Defending 99-pound champ John Gross of Forest (21-1) figures to turn back Arlington's Dan Weber (16-4-1) in the finals. A couple of strong dark horses at this weight are Conant's Ed Armstrong (6-9-1) and Don Sorensen of Hersey (11-8-1).

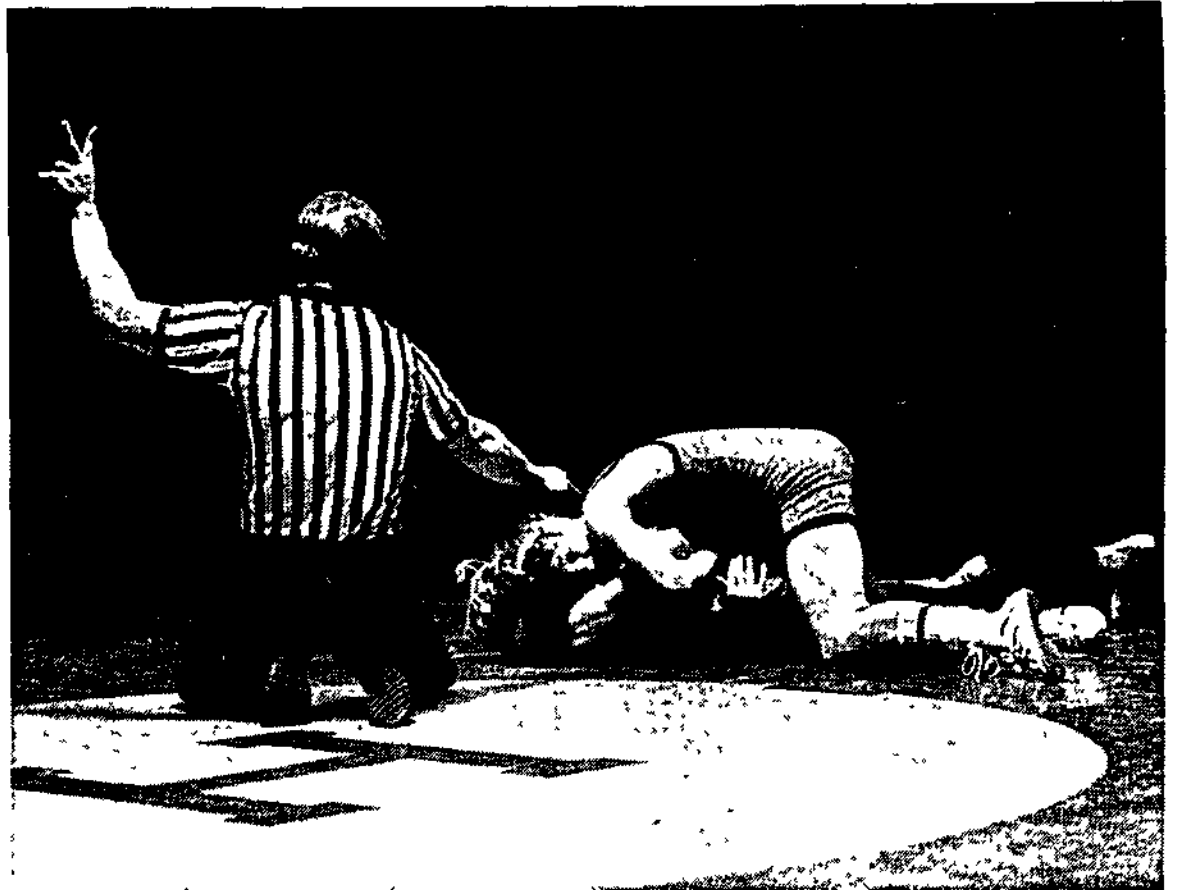

112 Pounds — A tough weight. Saxon Terry Ruddy (21-0-1) will have to work hard to retain his title for a third year. Runnerup contenders include Arlington's Gary Holub (9-3), Buffalo Grove's Jim Brugh (20-3), Falcon Jamie King (14-3-1), Huskie Jim Watters (7-4), Palatine's Paul Bordenkircher (9-6-1), Jim Carlstrom of Meadows (16-8) and Wheeling's Mike Reif (14-8-3).

119 Pounds — Just as tough and a classic showdown figures to develop between Bison Rich Wilhelm (23-1) and Mustang Roy Carlstrom (24-1) although defending champ Joe Hannon of Schaumburg (17-5) has other ideas. Also strong in the running are View's Kevin Smith (17-4-1) and Fremd's Doug McCarthy (13-10).

126 Pounds — This has to be the most rugged division. Pick any one of eleven: Redbird John Prellsing (17-4) Bison Greg Thomson (15-6-2), Conant's John Gallo (11-6-1), Falcon Guy Semar (11-9-2), Vike Diego Ramirez (15-4), Hersey's Dan Lococo (16-5), Hawk Dan Kaufman (13-6), Prospect's Jim Bethell (12-3-3), Mustang Roger Mattix (19-1), Saxon Ron Kuchnia (14-4-1) or Cat Phil Dietrich (12-10-1).

132 Pounds — Elk Grove's Rick Morris (18-0) is up from 126 to repeat. In the race for second are Card Dan Kennedy (10-5-2), Conant's Phil Kerr (13-6-2), Huskie Gary Hart (9-6) and Pirate Mike MacBride (13-7-2).

138 Pounds — Mark Furlong of Hersey (20-0) is the one to beat. His chief competition stands to be provided by Arlington's Lee Bube (9-6-2), Buffalo Grove's Doug Browning (16-5), Cougar Ron Burhite (16-4-2), Grenadier John Carpenter (12-2-2), Fremd's Ron Barry (9-7-3), Hawk Chad McCreary (11-4-2) and Pete Martin of Rolling Meadows (22-3-1).

TWO FOR THE SHOW. The official had a busy time of it while Hersey's Don Sorensen (top) and Arlington's Rich Bada were on the mat, the two 112-pounders combining to rack up over 30 points. Sorensen won this bout, but Arlington won the meet 24-17. Elk Grove will host the Mid-Suburban wrestling finals starting tonight.

Forest View, Schaumburg fielding veteran teams in state bowling meet

by PAUL LOGAN

The state bowling tournament will have a new format this weekend, but the faces of the finalists remain pretty much the same.

Both Forest View, the defending champion, and Schaumburg, third-place finisher last year, will have veteran teams in action this morning in the first round at Town and Country Lanes in Peoria.

Half the field will open up at 8 a.m. with the remainder going at 11 a.m. Quarterfinal play will begin at 2 p.m. The semifinals are set for 9 a.m. Saturday with the finals going at 1 p.m.

This is the third trip to the three-year-old tourney for both teams. The Forest View Falcons placed ninth two years ago with the Schaumburg Saxons taking second. Only one of the top three places has eluded Saxon coach Sharon Niekamp.

"Oh year, we can," said Niekamp of her team's chances of overtaking front-running Forest View. "I think we'll do it, really."

The Falcons present quite a challenge after crushing the opposition last Saturday in the Arlington District, knocking down 4011 pins. Only one other team had a better showing — Abingdon with 4911 pins in a downstate district.

Last year Nancy Lachus, then only a freshman, led the Falcons of Coach Diann Tomaine to the title over Hoopston-East Lynn (which also returns this year). Now a steady sophomore, Lachus paced her team in the district with a 175 average over six games.

Right behind her was a freshman! Judy Pleckhardt rolled a 161. Then came journey veterans Dale Smart with 158, Patty Russo with 154 and Dawn Powell with 153.

Schaumburg will be going with an all-senior lineup. Carrying the top averages from the district are Denise Huzar with 173, Cheryl Goocher with 161, Jean Con-

Diann Tomaine, Forest View's head coach

about last Saturday," said Forest View's coach of the easy district win. "Their big goal was going downstate. They're very excited about it."

By virtue of the district showings, some of the teams besides Abingdon (the 1973 winner) and Schaumburg are Rock Island (4722), Blue Island Eisenhower (4674) and Dixon (4573).

The latter team is causing some controversy because four of the five bowlers are boys. It's the only one so manned in the 32-team field.

The Dixon school board ruled against sponsoring a boys' team, so the quartet joined the girls' squad. Although the team isn't leading the district qualifiers, there's some fear that the boys took it easy in the second round of the district. All their scores fell off with only the one girl's three-game average being higher.

Today's bowling will see the top 16 scoring teams advancing to the quarterfinals. The eight highest scoring teams after that second round will advance to the semifinals. Total pin count for all rounds will determine the places of the four finalists.

What did you do on your weekend?

There are those days when it is an effort just to move out of the chair.

There are those weekends . . . That's the way it was last weekend, and that's why I spent my time in such places as North Carolina, California, Hawaii, Nevada and Florida.

This was all compliments of television and for somebody who grew up in the era of radio, I still find this medium, color and all, a little hard to believe. I traveled around the country Saturday and Sunday and didn't leave the house.

It all started at noon Saturday when Maryland tipped North Carolina State in a tremendous college basketball game. This may not be used in the classroom to teach the defensive game, but if you enjoy fast-paced action, and superb offensive basketball, it was a beauty.

I do wonder what it takes to get those announcers excited. The game was superb, but I thought I was listening to Pat Summerall and Kyle Rote team up for the Bluebonnet Bowl.

High school basketball followed on NBC, but I spend six days each week with the preps. I immediately switched the dial to WGN-TV at 2 p.m. to see how my alma mater, the University of Illinois, was going to look against Michigan State. It didn't take long.

I switched to the professional bowlers show at 2:30 p.m.

People can say all they want about bowling and its image of the past, but I still find this Saturday event one of the most appealing sports shows on television. It was superb entertainment again Saturday as Mark Roth rolled 11 straight strikes in the championship game but missed a $10,000 bonus and new car when a stubborn four pin stood on the final shot.

One reason for the television success of bowling is the confined area of competition and predictable flow of action. You win and you advance. You lose and you're out.

A few minutes after Roth left the four pin, Jim McKay, one of my very favorite announcers, came on with ABC's "Wide

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

World of Sports" and the figure skating championships from Oakland, Calif.

It still boggles the mind that I can sit and watch figure skating, but Wide World and the Olympics have given this sport a tremendous boost. The names are familiar now, and you can't deny that the performances are spectacular.

Is there such a thing as an ugly figure skater? They all must do toothpaste commercials.

I remember McKay, who even makes a demolition derby sound fascinating, as a court reporter on an old CBS production, "The Verdict Is Yours." He now has graduated to the all-time fantasy job, a position aspired to by every sports-loving, right-thinking American.

The longevity of the Wide World concept, "spanning the globe bringing you the constant variety of sport," is really an accident in sports. It was introduced in April of 1961, merely as a summer replacement. And its first show was dual coverage of the Penn and Drake Relays. The Penn telecast almost washed out in a heavy rain, killing Wide World before it began.

When rain forced postponement Saturday of the Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament from Honolulu, I had a rest from the tube. Indiana played Ohio State on Channel 44 in the evening, but nothing draws me away from the Mary Tyler Moore and Bob Newhart shows, not even the No. 1 ranked Hoosiers. Anchorman Ted Knight (Baxter) wins out over coach Bobby Knight.

It was back to the set Sunday afternoon and for somebody who doesn't care that much for tennis on television, I was enthralled with the match between Rod Laver and Jimmy Connors.

I later switched back and forth from tennis to women's "Super Stars" on ABC because that type of competition also is fascinating. It's just another example of how sharp the ABC chiefs are in sports programming. This "Super Stars" idea really has caught on, and announcer Keith Jackson, so very smooth in his delivery, adds to the production.

Until last weekend Mary Jo Peppler, a Rockford, Ill. native, was merely an excellent volleyball player, which entitled her to all the publicity she wanted. She earned $34,100 for winning "Super Stars" and must have earned a few laughs when she said, "The money's not the big thing. The women really appreciated getting together and meeting the top women in other fields."

That sounds good, Mary Jo, but I do hope you find something to do with the money.

After Mr. Connors and Ms. Peppler triumphed, I took a quick look at CBS and the pro basketball meeting between the Milwaukee Bucks and Boston Celtics. I'm not that enamored with the pro game, but the Celtics always are a delight, the only team I'd pay money to watch.

I spent a few minutes with "The Howard Cosell Sports Magazine," with Howard talking to George Foreman (yawn), and then it was back to Wide World for such unusual events as wrist wrestling and cliff diving, more of that "thrill of victory, agony of defeat."

I moved quickly past NBC's coverage of professional hockey because I refuse to squint, move my chair closer to the set, cuss or wonder which way the puck went. The puck comes in at 3 inches in diameter and weighs 5½ ounces. This sport simply is not suited for television.

ABC took me to Honolulu at 4 p.m. Sunday. Normally, I can do without every weekend golf tournament, waiting for the big four of the U.S. Open, Masters, British Open, and PGA. It's great if the two leaders are tied heading to the 18th green, but how many times does that happen?

The Hawaiian Open grabbed my interest because of one man — Arnold Palmer. There he was Sunday battling for the lead. Go, Arnie, go.

They can talk all they want about Johnny Miller and Jack Nicklaus, and they are tremendous golfers, but Arnold Palmer is . . . well, nobody can ever replace him. He first came to golf as a muscular young man who could not keep his shirttail in, who smoked a lot, perspired a lot and who hit the ball with all the finesse of a dock worker lifting a crate of auto parts.

Arnie made birdies by driving through forests, felling hooks around sharp corners, spewing wild slices over prodigious hills and then, all hunched up and pigeon-toed, staring putts into the cups.

It is precisely because of him the golf tour has tripled, quadrupled in money. He has become, they say, something more than life-size, something immeasurable in champs.

If this is true, it is not because of what he has won through the years but rather because of the pure, unmixed joy he brought to trying.

Watching Arnold Palmer battle Sunday for another title, a title he lost Monday to someone named Gary Groh, was the perfect way to end a long weekend of television.

It's on to Peoria...

Front-running Arlington to host dangerous Palatine

DOUBLE TEAMED. Hersey's Clyde Glass spots waving teammate Tom Burzak on the baseline despite the frantic antics of Arlington's Jerry DeSimone and Jim Grandt (22). Arlington upped its record to 9-0 in the league by whipping the Huskies, 81-48 Friday night. (Photo by Jim Frost)

A Herald staff report

The North Division's front-running and unbeaten Arlington Cardinals will put their 9-0 record on the line against physical Palatine (4-6) tonight in the circuit headliner to be carried live by WWMM-FM, 92.7, at 8:00.

Elsewhere in the division, 1-9 Hersey will rekindle its rivalry with 7-2 Wheeling while 6-4 Buffalo Grove challenges host Fremd (3-7) with all games scheduled for 8 p.m.

The Palatine Pirates should be ready for their basketball rematch with Arlington. The memory of a close, eight-point loss in January should be fresh in the Pirates' minds.

But when Palatine visits the Cardinals tonight, coach Ron Flinck's Pirates should be at the top of their game. They seemed to put everything together Tuesday when they defeated Fremd, 66-58.

Leading the assault was 6-5 senior Mark Mara, who strengthened his position as the MSL's second-highest scorer with 32 points. Mara is averaging 20.5 for 10 league games.

Palatine showed an inflexible zone defense which held Fremd to just 18 second-half points. The Vikings simply failed to move the ball inside against the shifting Palatine defense.

The Pirates got good efforts from Tom Luorio, Chris Burrus, Jim Maycan, and Art Stevenson as they moved the ball well against Fremd's touted full-court press.

It was the Pirates' relative ease in handling Fremd's pressure that has Arlington head coach George Zigman worried. The Cardinals thrive in keeping the opposition off balance with a full-court press and Zigman feels it has to be a factor against Palatine to help offset the Pirates' physical advantage.

"We have to come ready to play," he warned, "and hope our quickness can neutralize their strength on the boards. We also have to defense Mara down low and (Kevin) McKenna's outside shooting."

The Palatine pair combined for 39 of the team's 58 points in the first encounter.

Arlington will counter with its senior starting quintet of Jerry DeSimone, Mike Fogel, Terry Donahue, Denny Gaare and John Yeazel.

The Wheeling Wildcats go into tonight's game against Hersey looking like the cat that came away with a mouthful of feathers — and that's all. As close as they get, the 'Cats can't do more than ruffle the plumage of the Redbirds — or, the first-place Cardinals of Arlington.

Both teams are looking forward to next Tuesday's rematch at Wheeling, but Ted Ecker's Wildcats must contend with Hersey's Huskies first.

"Hersey's been having a rough go of it, but that's no reason to look right past them," continued the Wheeling coach. "Any time you take them lightly you're asking for trouble."

The first time the teams met, the 'Cats took an 81-58 decision as Keith Schildt, Steve Criss, and Ed Kruk provided the firepower. Schildt has moved into fifth place in the league scoring derby with a 16.7 average.

Hersey coach Roger Steingraber wants to see his Huskies snap a seven-game losing streak. The job will have to be done by a flock of underclassmen. Steingraber's regulars include just two seniors — Rick Madison and John Wozniak. The nucleus of the team is junior Clyde Glass, an all-conference candidate with a 15-point average.

Fremd remembers the last meeting with Buffalo Grove like it was yesterday. The Vikings went to Buffalo Grove in hopes of a victory over a younger Bison team. When the shooting had stopped, the Vikings had been drilled 85-61. They were shellshocked.

"We played an excellent game against Fremd last time," said Paul Grady, the Bison coach. "I hope we can do it again."

Keying the Bison win last month was the combination of Brian Allsmiller and Mike Ledna. Allsmiller poured in 23, many coming on brilliant lob passes from Ledna. Ledna also had time to score 15.

Fremd must somehow eliminate the Ledna lob as well as block out the taller Bison on the boards. Buffalo Grove had too many second and third tries in the January meeting.

The Vikings, now four games below the .500 mark (7-11), are smarting after losing to crosstown rival Palatine in the final minutes Tuesday night. They can still salvage .500 season, but the long road back must begin tonight.

Buffalo Grove, 11-7 overall, has been able to maintain its poise in several tight games recently. "It makes me feel that we're continuing to mature," said Grady.

Prospect seeks title tie with visit to Schaumburg

A Herald staff report
You can circle Tuesday, Feb. 25 on the calendar — that's when the Mid-Suburban League will decide on a basketball champion. And, if things go right for Prospect tonight, that title contest will be played at Prospect's fieldhouse.

The Knights (9-0) can clinch a tie for the South title with a victory at Schaumburg (0-10) tonight. And if visiting Elk Grove (4-5) beats second-place Forest View (7-3), they can bring out the party hats at Prospect. The Knights, then, could coast the rest of the way while a North champ is determined.

In the other South contest, Rolling Meadows (4-6) visits Conant (4-6). All MSL games start at approximately 8 p.m.

Prospect needs only two victories in its final four league games to clinch the division title. Two is the magic number.

But Prospect coach Bill Slayton isn't too concerned about magic numbers or champagne celebrations. He doesn't want his Knights to back into the MSL's championship match.

"We're approaching this Schaumburg game very defensively," said Slayton, whose team is 9-0 in league play. "I keep worrying about the law of averages catching up with us. It's awfully tough getting through an entire league schedule undefeated, no matter how good you are."

"The Schaumburg team is a whole lot better than that league record of theirs," Slayton cautioned. "The law of averages is bound to catch up with them sooner or later, too."

Prospect will employ its "tall" starting lineup Friday, which means that 6-3 forward Dave Mann will join 6-9 Paul Withers and 6-8 Doug Bonthron on the front line. Mike Quade and Al Black are Prospect's guards.

Coach Joe Breault of Schaumburg has a tough task in preparing his Saxons for the Knights, who toppled Schaumburg, 81-55, in January. Two bright spots are junior Jon McIlraith, who owns a 16.5

point-per-game average, and freshman John Chmiel, who has a 12-point average in four games.

When a 21-point lead melts into a shivering 50-49 victory, that is reason enough to put a high school basketball coach on the edge of his seat. And that is exactly what happened the last time the Elk Grove Grenadiers and Forest View Falcons met.

The Grens combined their brutally efficient defense with a good inside offensive game to almost put the Falcons away early. But things started going bad in a hurry for Bill Parmentier's team and before it was over, it took some key offensive rebounding and nifty clock-killing to save the verdict.

Elk Grove, now 4-5 and mathematically eliminated from the South title picture, has been having troubles on offense. Troubles like a 65-60 loss to Rolling Meadows where leading scorer Greg Kelley didn't get a basket.

Forest View, still smarting from Tuesday night's 79-71 loss to Rolling Meadows, is almost resigned now to concentrate on the state tournament season.

"It would be asking too much — a major miracle — to think we could still catch Prospect," Falcon head coach Ted Wissen admitted. His club is three games down in the loss column with just three to play and it doesn't appear as if Prospect is going to wait for anybody.

Wissen has nominated Van McLeod, Nate Adams, Dave Ennes, Mark Russo and Tony Donile to start in the rematch with Elk Grove.

On paper, with both teams at 4-6 and their conference title hopes gone the way of the 50c gallon of gasoline, tonight's Rolling Meadows and Conant clash looks like a sure cure for insomnia.

But don't be fooled. Meadows is coming off an upset of Forest View and the Cougars lashed out at Schaumburg with their best effort of the season to even their overall mark at 8-11.

Conant's recent surge of victories, four out of their last five games, has given the Cougars a new lease on life. They fell to Rolling Meadows by 10 points in their first meeting, but the jitters that caused them to miss several layups in that game should be gone.

Starters Ron Sulaski, John Rudzena, Pete Scalfidi, Mark Pellegrino and Ed Berry have been performing like sharks on the scent of blood, and Meadows may be coming into the Conant waters at the wrong time.

The Mustangs, meanwhile, are playing their best ball of the season and are rapidly closing on a .500 season at 9-11, but it doesn't surprise head coach Ken Aronson.

"I try to peak our team two times during the year," he said. "Once during the Christmas tournament and again prior to the state tournament."

Keying Meadows' surge has been a ferocious rebounding game and scoring balance. Tom Holl, Jerry McGill and Scott Green have been demons on the boards while John Hogan (the league's third-leading scorer with an 18.6 average) and Holl (17.7 over his last three games) have been setting the offensive tempo.

Saturday special

Dear Editor:

The addition of a Saturday edition of the Herald is a great idea and it was well received here. At a time when local interest in high school sports is at an all-time high, the Herald performs an excellent service to its readers by reporting all the top sports news. The Saturday paper is a natural since area sporting events — especially basketball and football — take place so much on Fridays.

Your sports coverage has always been superb, but with a Saturday edition it should be better than ever. Keep up the good work.

GREN'S FAN SPEAKS

Dear Fans Forum:

At Elk Grove High School we seem to be developing a problem with our basketball team and I would like to use up a little of your column space to talk about it.

It seems that some of us at EGHs have lost something during our basketball season. In the past few games our crowd has spent as much time arguing within itself, with the coach, and team as it has spent cheering for them. Is that what we're there for? I'm sure that is not our purpose. We fans are in the bleachers to support the Grenadier team, win or lose. It's time to remember that every person down on that court is giving 100 per cent of himself to that game, and we as fans should be giving each and every individual our 100 per cent support.

Connie Debeck converted the 3-6-10 split and Lada Hansman knocked down the 5-10 split.

Boat Show sailing to area

The people buying their first boat at the Sixth Annual Midwest Boat Show will also have a chance to learn basic boating at the show, which opens Friday, March 7 and runs through Sunday, March 16 at the Arlington Park Exposition Center.

The U.S. Coast Guard will again offer its free one-hour basic boating course each day of the show. This course was presented for the first time at a Chicago area boat exhibit at last year's Midwest Boat Show.

Course times will be 7-8 p.m. opening day, Friday March 7; 2-3 p.m. Saturdays and Sun., and 7-8 p.m. weekdays. The course is open to anyone attending the Boat Show.

Supplementing the course will be a continuous showing of films and slides on boating safety at the Coast Guard's booth at the show.

"It is our hope that this free course will make beginning boaters less apt to get into trouble on the water and to insure their safety and that of other boaters," Chief Douglas Sistrare says.

"We also hope it will interest boaters in taking some of the more advanced boating courses offered by the Coast Guard, the U.S. Power Squadrons and other organizations," he adds.

Hours for the Midwest Boat Show will be 6 - 10 p.m. opening day, Friday, March 7; noon - 10 p.m. Saturdays; noon - 7 p.m. Sundays and 4 - 10 p.m. weekdays. Admission will be $2.75 for adults and children over 12 and $1 for children under 12.

Northwest 'Y' swimming

Northwest Suburban YMCA's "A" swim team remains unbeaten this season after surviving one of its toughest meets... against Kankakee last Saturday.

The boys posted a final score of 194-125 while the girls made a strong showing of 27-111. The Cadet and Midget boys and the Midget and Intermediate girls really went to swim and came home with 30 of the 50 first prizes.

This Saturday, the team goes its separate ways with the boys meeting the Joliet team at home in the Joliet pool at 9 a.m. and the girls traveling to Joliet in the afternoon to try to keep up their good record.

On Sunday, Feb. 9th, many of the "Y" swimmers will go to the "Sweetheart Relays" at the Indian Boundary YMCA for a day of competition before beginning final weeks of training for the Cluster and State meets.

What Ziebart knows about rustproofing:

What car dealers know:

We use 2,000 pages of instructions compiled from factory specifications. Your car dealer uses a few pages of general directions from the salesman who sells him sealant.

We use 9 patented spray tools to get at every inch of vulnerable metal inside your car's body. Your car dealer uses 2, maybe 3 tools.

There are other important differences, too. And you should check them all out.

Area curling champion

Ann Brown, a resident of Arlington Heights, was a member of the state champion curling team from Exmoor Country Club that took the prize from Irilan Hill Country Club in the finals recently.

Brown, of 7 N. Forrest Avenue, played the vice-skip position.

Mike Groot

Zikes 33rd at Denver

Les Zikes, the bowling pro at Beverly Lanes, finished in 33rd position in the $60,000 Denver Open recently. Zikes rolled up 3936 pins in 18 games for a 218 average. Larry Laub, from San Francisco, took down the $7,000 first prize with a 199-191 victory over Jim Stefanich in the final game.

500th win celebration

A joint civic committee of more than 100 businessmen, union leaders, government officials and sports and media personalities will honor DePaul basketball coach Ray Meyer for his 500th career victory on Monday, Feb. 17.

Coch Meyer will be honored at a reception and dinner beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Martiniere Restaurant, 2500 W. 94th Place in Evergreen Park.

Tickets for the bash are $15 per person and may be reserved by contacting Joe McEgan at 323-4416 before Feb. 10.

From campuses nationwide

Area basketball players are making their mark on the college level. Ken Peters, an Arlington grad, is averaging 5.5 points a game for Georgia Tech and Chet Pustlosky, from Conant, broke into the starting lineup for Western Illinois University and responded with 22 points against Virginia Commonwealth.

Mike Groot of North Park College, who played his high school ball at Wheeling, tied a school scoring record recently with a 12 point explosion against Wheaton.

Groot, a senior at North Park with a 22.7 per game average, hit on 10 of 27 shots, most from long range, and was 6-for-9 at the free throw line.

North Park topped Wheaton 92-88 and Groot moved up to fifth in conference (CCIW) scoring with his performance.

Another member of this year's Harper College football team has accepted a scholarship to a four year school. Mike Muti and Frank Bavaro recently signed on with Southern Illinois University and just began the spring semester. Tackle John Kern received his scholarship from Drake University, where he will join with another former Hawk, John Herter. Herter has been elected to a co-captain spot on the Drake squad.

South Dakota College also has a pair of Harper players in Rob Kruse and Gary Prince. Kruse was just voted captain and Prince was chosen honorable mention all-conference.

Terry Stenger is a member of the 1975 Lake Forest College wrestling team. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Stenger, 120 Gentry Court in Hoffman Estates.

Terry, a 150-pound junior, is undefeated after his first five matches.

The Indiana State University gymnastics team is being helped considerably by several area products. They are Bob Mellin of Palatine, Craig Combs and John Golbeck of Arlington Heights, and Ed Paul of Des Plaines.

Mellin recently hit a 9.45 on free exercise while Paul and Golbeck scored 9.3 and 9.15 respectively on the side horse.

Cadet Tom Zindler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Zindler, 1109 West Fairview Ave. in Arlington Heights, is a member of the swimming team at the Missouri Military Academy.

Cadet Zindler, a senior, in his first year of swimming.

John Anderson, a graduate of Malno West, received a varsity award for his performance on the Eastern Illinois University soccer team.

Three area track and field athletes competed in an indoor dual meet recently between the University of Illinois and Northwestern University. Competing for NU was Bill Jarocki, who placed third in the 600-yd. run with a time of 1:11.6.

The Illini's shot put team was aided by former Illinois state high school champion John Sloan, who tossed the orb 49-6'1" and Jerry Finish, who had a put of 48-1'1".

Finis and Jarocki attended Fremd while Sloan came out of Rolling Meadows High School.

CONANT'S Corey Rathman looks for a pass as Prospect's Mike Quade (12) falls to the floor. Prospect thumped the Cougars, 71-46, Friday night.

Wei vs. Staren at River Trails

National rankings will be a dime a dozen this weekend (Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 8-9) when six survivors reassemble at River Trails Tennis Center, Mount Prospect, to decide the Chicago District boys' 16-and-under indoor singles title.

Top-seeded Ted Staren of Hinsdale, former national 15-and-under champion, will meet No. 3 seed Paul Wei of Arlington Heights, No. 20 nationally in the 1st, in a 5 p.m. Friday semifinal.

One of two 6:30 p.m. Saturday quarterfinals will pit 13-year-old Bruce Brescia of River Forest, No. 3 nationally in the 12s, against No. 2 seed Keith Rudman, 15, of Chicago. The other will bring together Corey Westberg, No. 4 seed of Homewood, and Chris Cunin of Kirtland, Ohio.

The quarterfinal winners will meet at 9 p.m. Saturday. The final is set for 2 p.m. Sunday.

Lions visit deSales; Girard 3rd in league

Glenn Girard can improve his position in the East Suburban Catholic scoring race and St. Viator might retain chances of a .500 conference season when the Lions play tonight at St. Francis deSales. Tip-off is approximately 8 p.m.

Girard, Viator's 6-foot-8 junior center, ranks third in ESCC scoring with 175 points. Leaders are St. Patrick's Emmet McGovern, 223, and Holy Cross' Cliff Augustine, 184.

Three games remain for all clubs. McGovern appears safely out front so it's a battle for runner-up. Others in the top five are Notre Dame's Rich Ferina, 172, and St. Joseph's Doug Copeland, 171.

Viator's Paul Kastner ranks 12th, 128 points, and teammate Bill Foreman is 17th, 109.

The Lions kept hopes alive for a break-even season when they slugged Carmel by 21 points this past Friday. At 4-7 in ESCC games and 7-11 overall, they face

Glenn Girard

St. Francis' Pioneers who own 3-8 and 6-14 records.

Viator prevailed, 57-54, when the clubs met early last month in Arlington Heights. But deSales lost by just two last weekend against pre-season conference favorite St. Patrick.

West to travel; seeks 4th straight triumph

Tom Kummer, George Woodley, Fred Horn, Dennis Willison and Bruce Kerr are not easily forgotten in Des Plaines. They provided thrust behind Maine West's last great basketball team.

It was 1970-71 and the Warriors blasted out a 17-5 record to share the Central Suburban title with Maine South. Their season ended in one of this area's classic regional finals, an 80-76 loss to Arlington.

But during three following seasons, West slipped to 13-11, 11-12 and 9-15 records. They dominated few teams.

Today's West athletes are brothers Steve and Bob Zuccarini, Glen Heiden, John Clark, Paul Dick and Bill Makuch. They're the finest Warrior basketball team since the '70-71 club.

And that's the best description of these 10-7 Warriors. They are One Team, not many individuals.

Maine will defend its 6-3 Central Suburban South record and three-game win streak at eight o'clock tonight in Glenbrook North's Spartans gymnasium.

And a victory this evening would provide West its first four-game win streak since... well, since Kummer, Woodley, Horn, Willison and Kerr.

Their hosts, the GBN Spartans, were five games above .500 early last month but must now struggle to finish even. Most of last year's 22-2 team graduated and these Spartans are 10-9.

It's actually been three "small seasons" for Glenbrook. They were 2-2 after four games, then won seven-of-eight and now have lost five-of-six.

Forward Steve Zuccarini, 16.1, and guard Heiden, 15.8, lead Maine in average points per Central Suburban games. Next are Dick 11.1, Bob Zuccarini 7.5, Clark 6.8 and Makuch 5.3.

Clayton Lund, 12.8, and All-America footballer Jack Moller, 11.6, pace to Spartans.

Maine East, wondering how to break a five-game losing streak, tries twice this weekend. The Demons will host Deerfield tonight and Waukegan on Saturday, both at 8 p.m.

Deerfield is an uncharacteristic 5-11 and should be a worthy opponent for East, now 6-12. Waukegan's great work occurred last weekend, a 59-52 upset of Maine South.

East's top scorers are Mark Mahoney, 18.6, and Mark Berns, 13.7 per game.

Maine North travels to Elmwood Park tonight for an O'Hare Suburban Conference game.

Hersey, Forest View swimmers collect non-league victories

Hersey and Forest View scored non-conference varsity swimming victories this week but Wheeling was beaten.

The Hersey Huskies won every event and triumphed, 115-51, at McHenry. Forest View had seven winners during a 108-57 victory over Adlai Stevenson. Wheeling lost at Libertyville, 101-71.

Chris Tague won 500 freestyle, 4:52.0, plus 200 individual medley, 2:07.0, and joined Tim Wheeler, Dick Hawes and John Siler to win 400 freestyle relay, 3:31.8, for Hersey.

Hawes captured 100 and 200 freestyles, 51.2 and 1:50.0. Siler won 100 butterfly, 57.9. Other Hersey winners were Craig Bruce in 60 freestyle, 24.0, Jeff Polcyn in 100 backstroke, 1:01.1, and Greg Polcyn in 100 breaststroke, 1:10.2.

Siler, Polcyn, Wheeler and Bruce won 200 medley relay, 1:51.0. Bill Cashmore took diving, 269.65.

Oko Pearson and Kevin Rodig won twice as Forest View beat Stevenson. Pearson took 100 and 200 frees, 55.2 and 2:00.7. Rodig won individual medley, 2:23.2, and 500 free, 5:20.8.

Falcon winners included Mike Zahakaylo in backstroke, 1:05.2, Jim Kanteck in breaststroke, 1:11.6, and Mark Oliver in butterfly, 1:06.4.

Zahakaylo, Kanteck, Rodig and Buczek won medley relay, 1:52.8. Oliver, Buczek, Jon DeLew and Pearson won freestyle relay, 3:45.0.

Wheeling's Dan Mackie won individual medley, 2:17.5, and Mike Wargo captured diving, 156.4, during the loss at Libertyville.

At Beverly Lanes

Vivian Herman rolled all spares on her way to a 170 game in recent Arlington Heights Women's Keglers action. Herman had games of 197-170-150 for a 505 series. She rolls for the Sullivan Pontiac team.

At Brunswick Northwest

Goldie Baldassari bowled a 204 game to highlight recent action in the Washday league at Brunswick Northwest lanes.

In other Washday action, Terry Anacina rolled a 211-163-135-509 series, and Dolores Svecic had high games of 196 and 187 for a 505. Jan Markise contributed a 164-169-169-512.

At Thunderbird Lanes

The Yellow team maintained its lead in the Lady Elks League as Lou Meder highlighted the bowling with a 430 scratch series and a 185 game. Meder's average is 114. Nan Larsen rolled a 612. Those who rolled 300 games with handicap were Seder (227), Gladys Fontana (200), Rosanna Glueckert (204), Fran Mechella (200), Alice Rectoris (230), Fran Batten (212), and Connie Zordon (210-206).

At Thunderbird Lanes

Diane Andreas bowled a 183-163-164 for a 500 series during action in the women's Ivy Leagues league at Thunderbird Lanes. Sally Stull picked up a 6-7-8-10 split and Marilyn Duran converted a 6-7-10 split.

At Elk Grove Bowl

Jim Nelson led the Mixed Nuts League with a 593 series, including games of 300 and 312. Frank Columbo was the second highest roller with a 576 series, including a 198 effort. Other high series were scored by Ardell Westman with a 570 (234), Sharrie Hildebrand with a 558 (203), Dolores DeFiorio with a 507 (188) and Karen Olson with a 201.

Mellin, other local gymnasts to compete at Circle campus

Indiana State University, currently the nation's premier gymnastics school and with four team members who competed in the Mid-Suburban League, will visit Illinois' Chicago Circle campus for a dual meet at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Ex-Fremd athlete Bob Mellin, now of ISU, will work floor exercise. He's ranked third nationally with a 9.55 score.

Prospect's Ed Paul and Arlington's John Goldbeck, who both work side horse, and Arlington free-ex performer Craig Combs will also be with the Indiana State contingent.

Indiana State, by virtue of its 218.00 top dual meet score, leads the nation in major college Division I rankings. Illinois-Chicago Circle ranks ninth among all universities and second in Division II.

Illinois' upset hopes rest with Chuck Warner, their All-America all-around man who won last year's Division II national title on parallel bars.

The Illinois squad also features defending national champion Greg Anderson on side horse and Chuk Farny, an All-America in free exercise who competes All-Around with Warner.

Saturday's meet will be held in Circle's Main Gym, 901 W. Roosevelt Rd., Chicago.

Rolling Meadows Traveling Squirrels

Rolling Meadows Warriors 4, Northbrook "B" 1

The Warriors skated enough to stay ahead of their opponents. They scored twice in the first and third periods, but came up empty in the second. Rucky Perillo scored in the first period assisted by Greg Kowalewski, and Tim Schroll scored unassisted. In the third period Mike Yosenick scored assisted by Scott Sanders and Eric Orinua scored assisted by Mike Gasliano. Mike Whaler and Danny Perillo shared the victory in the net.

Rolling Meadows Warriors 2, Glenview 9

In the second meeting between the Rolling Meadows Warriors and Glenview in a North Suburban Hockey League game, the score was the same. However, the Warriors were harder pressed this time. Only their edge skating held them ahead. They had some trouble containing Glenview in their own end. Scoring for the Warriors were John Pezek assisted by Scott Sanders and Bill Chalcovian late in the second period. In the third period Greg Kowalewski finished the scoring. Mike Whaler and Danny Perillo teamed up in the net for another shutout.

Elk Grove hockey

Elk Grove High School won two games in the Northwest Suburban hockey league action last week defeating Prospect 7-4 and Conant 6-1.

In action against Prospect Tony Saltaroli scored the first goal assisted by Joe Danca and Bob Brunn. Bill Tucker scored the second goal assisted by Joe Chiraki. Gary Pratschard scored the third goal assisted by Bob Brunn and Terry Glos. Joe Danca scored the fourth goal assisted by Tony Saltaroli. Gary Pratschard scored the fifth goal assisted by Bob Brunn. Mark Rodseth scored the sixth goal assisted by Joe Danca and Mike Walsh. Mike Tucker scored the seventh goal assisted by Joe Danca and Mark Rodseth to outline Elk Grove's 7-4 victory.

Against Conant, in one of the more exciting games of the season, Elk Grove came back from a 3-1 first period deficit, with Larry Wittich scoring for Elk Grove assisted by Mike Walsh.

In the second period Mark Rodseth scored the only goal assisted by Mike Tucker to give Conant a 3-2 lead after 2 periods.

In the third period Bob Brunn scored the tying goal assisted by Joe Danca and Mike Tucker. Conant then scored taking a 4-3 lead. Joe Danca tied the game for Elk Grove assisted by Terry Glos and Bob Brunn. Joe Uharik scored the fifth goal assisted by Larry Wittich and Bob Brunn. Brunn scored the sixth goal assisted by Mark Rodseth.

A FORTRESS OR A CASTLE? Square, block structures with less window space and more brick and mortar create facades that some call beautiful and others call ugly. Interiors are built for flexibility and movement between classes. Buffalo Grove High School is designed with rooms grouped according to academics around study areas.

by JUDY JOBBITT

School buildings are taking on a new look.

No longer is the "egg crate" design considered the best and brightest for youngsters today.

New schools are sprouting across the Northwest suburbs with open space, flexibility and a new appearance.

Some call these schools fortresses and gunboats. Others marvel at the variety of space these buildings offer. Still others think they are beautiful and wonder why educators waited so long.

SCHOOL DESIGN has taken a sharp turn since the mid-60s. Carpeting, acoustical tiles, vibrant colors and open space are among the major changes in schools today. Classrooms may be created in a larger open space by placing bookcases, a bulletinboard or desk to enclose space. Some schools have put movable walls in the larger space that can be moved if teachers no longer want the small classroom.

In 1965 the first of the "open" schools in the nation was built with the Barrington Middle School. Once it was completed and the problems ironed out, more districts took note and began to change school designs to meet today's more flexible educational programs.

In the past, the diversity of school programs did not demand the space needs required today.

Students lined up in neat rows of desks with the teacher at the front giving the day's lessons — that was the pattern for most instruction in the past.

Times have changed and today's education programs include a variety of teaching techniques and arrangements of students.

LEARNING RESOURCE centers — expanded libraries — also require larger rooms. The state now recommends that learning centers seat 15 per cent of the student body, which is four to eight times the size of the former library, said Ken Unteet, High School Dist. 211 architect.

Team teaching by two or more teachers who combine their talents also is widely used and can benefit from classrooms that are connected with folding doors.

The building is supposed to embody the educator's needs. "We try to reflect the education philosophy in brick and mortar," said Unteet.

"We want an architect to give us his expertise to meet our education requirements, not something that is a castle in his dreams," said Joseph Kiszka, Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 deputy superintendent.

"School architecture has to be a leader as far as architecture goes," said Ray Pigozzi, architect of Berkley School in Arlington Heights Dist. 25. "It has to look good because it has to rub off on the kids somehow."

SCHOOLS SUCH as Berkley, Palatine Junior High School in Dist. 15 and Hoffman Estates High School in Dist. 211 are among the newer schools in the Northwest suburbs which have attempted to combine esthetics, education functions and simplicity within a budget.

Berkley has a modified open plan which allows classrooms to be partitioned. The learning center is the hub of activity in the school and is surrounded by four academic areas and the multi-purpose room.

"Structure-wise, this building could have been done 20 years ago," said Pigozzi, but education programs did not need and could not use this type of space until recently.

"We drew two schemes for Berkley — an egg crate (enclosed classrooms) and the one we built," he said. "It takes an energetic superintendent who can get everyone excited. That's what happened." The key word in designing school buildings today is flexibility.

"While you can open up space, you also must find ways to temporarily close it up," said Donald Strong, Dist. 25 superintendent.

"The pendulum swings from one end to the other," said Kiszka. "We've moved from the egg crate to a plan where space can be increased or made smaller. Now we have multi-purpose rooms" that can be used as a gym, lunch room or community activities room.

SCHAUMBURG TOWNSHIP Dist. 54

Architects still goof despite modern methods

While architectural wonders may be on the horizon with school buildings today, goofups — past and present — are still here to contend with.

In 1958 when Blackhawk School in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 was built it was glorified as a landmark in school architecture. The building was written about in national magazines for its innovative design.

Now the six-sided, wooden-frame building may be abandoned by Dist. 54 for school use because renovation would cost as much as a new building.

Kimball Hill School in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 also had to undergo extensive renovation to meet practical use.

THE SCHOOL, built in 1954, was constructed in the "California" design — all rooms open to the outside which eliminates indoor hall space. The concept makes practical use of space and construction costs for California schools where the climate is warm, but for Chicago's unpredictable weather, it soon became a headache. Every time youngsters have to go to gym, they have to bundle up for the outdoor trek.

To remedy this problem, the district opened up the interior of the school with doors between classrooms. Now two to four rooms connect.

Other districts also have run into their share of problems with innovative designs.

Architecturally, Friendship Junior High School in Elk Grove Township Dist. 50 met its purpose — it is soundproofed against heavy jet-air traffic.

UNFORTUNATELY THE school, built in 1973, is too soundproof. Noise in the building resounds and disrupts classes.

To meet this problem, the district is considering piping in "white sound," an overhead drone that will make other noise produced less distracting.

High School Dist. 214 also built a new school designed to meet modern educational needs with Rolling Meadows High School.

Rolling Meadows is designed with open classrooms in academic units. The rooms do not have doors, but rather open up onto a study area. The rooms also are triangular with four to a larger "pod" or square-room arrangement.

HOWEVER, TEACHERS and students had problems adjusting to the noise. Teachers found noise carried to adjacent rooms so students had to be kept quiet.

In response to the problems at Rolling Meadows, Dist. 214 made adjustments in Buffalo Grove High School which was built later with a similar design. More enclosed classroom space was included in the design and the walls extend further to cut down on the noise passage.

Revolution in classroom design

Li'l red schoolhouse —changin' with times

OPEN SCHOOL structures such as Hawthorne School, Wheeling, are the latest innovation in school design. At Hawthorne, classrooms are not separated by walls and are placed around the learning resource center, the hub of school activity. Walls can be installed later if teaching techniques and needs change.

has developed its recent building program around a prototype, Muir School built in 1973. Six schools have been built since, using Muir's basic design.

Muir uses individualized guided education which combines team teaching, open classrooms and individualized instruction.

The other schools have been redesigned to meet their unique problems, student enrollment and special programs such as those for physically handicapped or hard of hearing students.

Some of the technological breakthroughs that have allowed the current building designs include "demountable" walls and the more economical folding walls. Demountable walls require a team of 10 persons to move them and are used in spaces that will be maintained for an extended period of time.

FOLDING WALLS are used where classroom space might be changed on a daily basis for team teaching or a special program or unit.

Carpeting also has become economical for school districts to purchase. It has become competitive with tiling for the initial purchase and is cheaper to maintain.

ACOUSTICAL TILING has also allowed schools to open up space. With noise muffled students' activities do not carry as far.

Vandalism and heating and air conditioning costs also have brought about schools with less window space.

With technology and education programs constantly developing, residents can expect continued innovation in school design in the coming years. As schools have progressed from the big red schoolhouse of the twenties to the chrome and plastic schools of the fifties and on to today's "open" space schools, they will continue to change as the times, resources and needs demand.

Late selling for profit erases gains

Dow dips 3.68 in 2nd-heaviest day

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Stock Exchange experienced the second-heaviest trading day in its 183-year history Thursday. Late selling for profit erased early gains.

The Dow Jones industrial average, ahead around eight points during the day, lost 3.68 at 714.17. It gained 9.78 Wednesday. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.32 to 78.56. The average price of an NYSE common share declined by 8 cents.

Advances topped declines, however, 860 to 642, among the 1,841 issues crossing the tape.

Volume soared to 32,020,000 shares, second to the all-time high 32,130,000 traded Jan. 27. It marked the 10th consecutive session volume totaled 20 million or more shares. Wednesday's turnover amounted to 25,830,000 shares.

THE HEAVY SELLING for profits was considered normal in light of the gains made recently. Observers also said Wall Street has not lost sight of the deepening recession.

Also contributing to the late selling was a vote by the House Ways and Means Committee to put a $100-million cap on new investment credit for American Telephone & Telegraph. AT&T lost 1 1/4 to 48 1/2 on 266,700 shares, the seventh most active issue of the day. The warrants led the actives, unchanged at 7/8 on 725,100 traded, including a block of 230,000 at 1.

THERE WERE NUMEROUS large blocks which affected the active list. Marriott Corp. was the second most active issue, off 1/8 to 9 5/8 on 482,800 shares, including blocks of 250,000 and 167,800 shares, both at 10 1/4. Cenco was third, up 1/2 to 5 7/8 on 319,500 shares, including a block of 160,000 shares at 6 1/4.

Electronics and computers turned mixed. Oils were mixed. Steels, rails, aircrafts, airlines and chemicals were mixed.

Unilever was the biggest gainer of the day, rising 8/4 to 25 3/4 on 200 shares.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased by seven cents. Volume totaled 3,273,000 shares, compared with 2,927,000 traded Wednesday.

Little ol' Champaign has more phones than people

by STEVE NOVICK

• The most current figures available from Illinois Bell Telephone Co. show that Arlington Heights has 63.9 telephones per 100 persons living in the village, a shade under the national average of 65.47 phones per hundred.

Champaign, home of the University of Illinois, is one of five communities in the world with more phones than people. . . 103.1 phones for each 100 persons living there.

• Commonwealth Edison Co. plans to sell $125 million in first mortgage bonds on Feb. 18, subject to satisfactory market conditions. Maturity date of the bonds are to be determined the early part of next week.

• Sears, Roebuck and Co. and Montgomery Ward and Co. both report sales up for the four-week period ending Jan. 25. Sears states that its sales are up .8 per cent compared to the same four-week period one year ago; Ward's are up 4.5 per cent.

At Sears, gross sales were $845.5 million, an increase of $4.7 million over sales of $840.7 million one year ago. Wards states its gross sales were $194 million compared with $185.7 million a year ago.

• New Positions: James E. McShane,

1243 Baldwin Ln., Palatine, has been appointed vice president and group publisher of Technical Publishing Co., Barrington. The firm publishes national business and professional magazines and provides educational services to industry. . . John L. Leech has been appointed president and general manager of Universal Oil Products Co.'s chemicals division. Leech was formerly director of corporate marketing and development at UOP's headquarters in Des Plaines.

• New Businesses: Newly formed corporations reported in January include Central Automatic Screw Products Inc., 770 Lee St. Des Plaines, which will manufacture products on automatic screw machines; the Elk Grove Restaurant Corp., 1010 Grove Mall, Elk Grove Village, a restaurant; Most Desserts & Pastries Inc., Golf Road Shopping Center, Hoffman Estates; Touhy-Elmhurst Service Inc., 800 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, a gasoline service station; and Tri-Kelly Movers Inc., 16 E. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg, will transport electronics goods, household and office furnishings; John T. Torretto Inc., 114 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights, will serve as a sales rep for various lines of clothing; Pa Ba Inc., 1110 E. Algonquin rd., Schaumburg, will buy and sell new and used automobiles, trucks, trailers, motorcycles, boats and all related parts; Universal Power Systems Inc., 200 Lee St., Mount Prospect, will buy, sell and service electrical and mechanical equipment and parts.

Officials huddle on Bears' stadium for Arlington

by KURT DAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track, it was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $35 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clarbour of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clarbour said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clarbour said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings, but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was 1½ or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clarbour said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 5,000-unit housing development on race-track property.

Clarbour said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 80-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin L. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center, The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill, it was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973. Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

MILITARY POLICEMEN in Cambodia place bodies on a sidewalk after two of three 107mm rockets were fired into Phnom Penh, killing eight kindergarten children and wounding many others.

Kindergarten class hit by rockets in Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist gunners fired rockets into the Cambodian capital Thursday, hitting a kindergarten during classes and a busy thoroughfare near the central market. Military officers said the casualties included eight tots killed and 11 others wounded. Fragments of the deadly rockets ripped into young children, benches and walls of the kindergarten in front of the Information Ministry.

Phnom Penh commander Gen. Chhim Chhun warned the population in a communique that pro-Communist rebels had infiltrated the Cambodian capital and surprise attacks could take place "any time." He told district and ward chiefs to start digging trenches.

In neighboring South Vietnam, Communist saboteurs attacked three civilian buses in the Mekong Delta, killing seven persons and wounding another.

In other world unrest:

• Government troops opened fire in downtown Lima Thursday to put down scattered looting and disorders in the aftermath of a police strike that developed into a full-scale rioting.

The city — which at times looked like a battleground Wednesday — sounded like a mopping-up operation. Stretches of quiet were followed by bursts of heavy rifle fire as special soldiers and special police units brought from an anti-subversive school scattered groups of looters.

• The official death and injury toll was not available, but informed estimates said that more than 30 persons were killed in the violence.

However, an official announcement acknowledged "some losses of life, numerous wounded and the detention of a great number of persons involved in the disturbances."

• Ethiopian government reinforcements sent through Eritrean rebel ambushes Thursday to reach the encircled Garrison of Asmara in the seventh day of fighting reported to have killed 1,000 persons.

Diplomats in Addis Ababa said the American government had decided to evacuate the bulk of its remaining citizens from Asmara as conditions deteriorated.

Dallas chief won't reopen JFK probe

Police Chief Donald Byrd said in Dallas Thursday he will not initiate a renewed investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy as a result of recent contentions the killer was other than Lee Harvey Oswald. If reopening of the case is warranted, Byrd said, it should start with other agencies. Political activist Dick Gregory and a New York photographer, Robert Groden, said in Chicago this week filmed evidence shows as many as four or five persons shot at the president in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, none of them Oswald.

Church pledges coordinated CIA inquiry

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate's special inquiry into CIA activities, pledged Thursday to coordinate as far as possible with any House investigation. "I will stand ready to cooperate," Church told reporters at the conclusion of the Senate panel's initial two-hour organizational meeting. He said both the Senate and the projected House investigation might hold joint hearings, and devise "a rational division of labor."

Link wiretapping to 'police state'

Uncontrolled government wiretapping and surveillance have made Americans paranoid and could lead to "a future police state," Congress was told Thursday. Two members of Congress and attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union urged a House Judiciary subcommittee to approve a flat ban on any future federal eavesdropping on private citizens except under court order.

Airport map maker, designer disagree

A government airport map maker and a private airport designer disagreed Thursday over the adequacies of charts for the landing approach that claimed a TWA jetliner and 92 lives on a Virginia mountain top. Harry Ross of the Federal Aviation Administration said the approach chart was "entirely adequate" for leading a pilot to a safe landing. But Richard A. Shea, the private expert, told a federal inquiry that a cross-section "profile" of the descent should be extended farther than six miles from the end of the runway.

Crime down on rapid transit lines

Chicago Police Superintendent James Rochford said Thursday crime fell 54 per cent over the past 42 days on the city's rapid transit lines due to increased police patrols. Rochford said that 6,740 persons were arrested on trains or at train stations between Dec. 26 and Feb. 5.

Kissinger eyes Israeli stage II plan

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger hopes to get a detailed Israeli plan for a second-stage troop separation accord with Egypt in the Sinai desert during his extended Middle East trip next week, Israeli government sources said Thursday. The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said the Soviet Union has already told Egypt it approves a second-stage disengagement. Kissinger has also scheduled at least two meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Justice Department probes amendment

Wallace may be in office illegally

MONTGOMERY, ALA. (UPI) — The Justice Department said Thursday it was checking into provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act to determine whether Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is holding office illegally.

The issue is a 1967 state constitutional amendment which reversed an Alabama law preventing a governor from succeeding himself. The 1965 Voting Rights Act provided that any law change in Alabama, or five other Southern states, which might affect minority voting rights had to be submitted to the Justice Department in Washington for approval.

The Alabama amendment was not submitted, and a Justice Department official said the department was trying to determine whether it should have been.

"One major question to be answered first is whether the Alabama succession amendment is a change covered by the provisions of the Voting Rights Act," he said.

The spokesman said if it is found the state erred, Alabama would then be required to submit the amendment for review. "The amendment will then be evaluated to determine if it has a discriminatory purpose or effect."

Wallace, who many believed sought a second successive term as Alabama's governor as a possible stepping stone to the presidency, refused comment on the issue, which was first brought to light by the Birmingham Post-Herald.

Any action by the Justice Department

in the case would affect not only Wallace, but Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley and Atty. Gen. William J. Baxley, both of whom are serving successive terms.

Beasley said he didn't anticipate any problem. "I can't imagine the election of the top three officers of the state and the vote of the people could in any way be subject to change," he told UPI.

Press Secretary Billy Joe Camp said Wallace just wasn't "going to say anything," and Baxley's office said he was out of town and would not return until next week.

The Birmingham Post-Herald is a frequent critic of Wallace. The reporter who broke the story said he picked up the tip in a conversation, but would not comment further.

Gordon Madison, a former assistant attorney general who would have been responsible for submitting the measure, conceded he did not remember whether he sent a copy of the amendment to the Justice Department.

Panel OKs $20 billion tax cut measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee, acting in only four days, approved a $20.1 billion tax cut bill Thursday that includes rebates of up to $200 for everyone who paid federal income taxes in 1974.

The bill, approved 28-5, would concentrate its tax relief on low and moderate income levels, but every taxpayer would get some form of payment from the government no matter how high or low the income.

House action appeared likely to come within several days after Congress returns from a recess on Feb. 18.

The Ways and Means bill was $4 billion higher than the package President Ford proposed as an economic stimulant to ease the current recession.

The bill would grant $8 billion in rebates — actually refunds — of 1974 personal income taxes, $8.3 billion in tax cuts on this year's income for low and middle income persons, and $3.8 billion in business and investment incentives.

The tax-writing committee, pushed hard by its new chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., began writing the bill Monday. Ullman had promised to keep the committee late into Thursday night if necessary, but work was completed in early evening with a round of applause and cheering for the work of the staff.

Changing its mind at the last minute, the committee decided not to cut off 1974 tax rebates to persons making more than $30,000 to $40,000.

However, anyone making more than $30,000 could get no more than $90 to $100. The final rebate figure will be calculated later to remain within a committee-imposed limit of $8 billion.

The rebate would work this way: Every family or single taxpayer would get back 10 per cent of the taxes he paid in 1974 up to a maximum of $200. Those who paid less than $100 in taxes would get back the full tax they paid.

The maximum would begin shrinking when income reached $20,000, phasing down to the maximum $90 to $100 at $30,000 of income.

A form of negative income tax for the working poor was approved earlier by the committee. This provision would grant a payment of 5 per cent of earned income to anyone making $4,000 or less even if they paid no taxes. This credit would phase out as income went above $4,000 one making more than $6,000.

Other income tax cuts for individuals would take the form of lower withholding rates in the last half of this year. This would be accomplished by increasing the standard deduction which many low and moderate income persons — and a scattering of the wealthy — use rather than itemizing deduction.

Ford requested only a 12 per cent rebate of 1974 taxes, up to a maximum of $1,000.

The $28 billion in business tax cuts would affect companies which invest in new plant equipment, and would help small businesses.

Wife of Wrigley family member murdered

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The wife of a millionaire member of the Wrigley chewing gum family was found dead early Thursday, her body stuffed in a barrel filled with concrete. Her husband's male nurse was arrested on suspicion of murder.

A missing person report was filed with police Wednesday on Nancy Atwater, 50, and questioning of the nurse, Daniel Bedellian, 49, led to discovery of her stabbed and bludgeoned body in an auto wrecking yard at Pacoima in the San Fernando Valley, a section of the city of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Atwater's husband, A. G. Atwater is the brother of the wife of P. K. Wrigley, head of the chewing gum firm.

Atwater is an invalid and requires nurses around the clock, police said. Bedellian had the night shift.

Police questioned him about the whereabouts of Mrs. Atwater and he led them to Pacoima where her body was found in a 55-gallon drum. Wet cement had been poured into the drum, but had not hardened properly and investigators dug through it to get the body.

Mrs. Atwater, police said, was wealthy in her own right and had been married to Atwater about eight years. He served as sales manager and executive vice president of the chewing gum company before illness forced his retirement.

Labor chief Brennan is resigning

• Peter J. Brennan, 13th labor secretary, said Thursday he is resigning. His successor is expected to be John T. Dunlop, former director of the Cost of Living Council. Brennan expects to remain in office until "the latter part of March," allowing Dunlop time for transition. Meanwhile, James T. Lynn, outgoing secretary of Housing and Urban Development, will be sworn in Monday as President Ford's new budget director. Lynn will replace Roy Ash as head of the Office of Management and Budget.

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Koeppen says he weighed try for building director

by JOE FRANZ

Wheeling Trustee John Koeppen, a candidate for reelection in April, considered applying for the vacant post of village building director, he said Thursday.

"I thought of applying for the job, but then decided it wouldn't be such a good idea," he said. "I thought I'd be opening myself up to a lot of criticism because of my position with the village."

"The idea never got very far because I never followed through," he said. "It was a thought and the thought died because I never did take out an application."

The trustee said he considered applying for the post before he made the decision to seek reelection to the village board. "I was thinking about it in September or October, long before I had decided to run for another term," he said.

KOEPPEN, A candidate on the Wheeling Community Party slate, announced his candidacy in January. The Herald learned that Koeppen was considering applying for the post from Trustee Albert Lang, one of his running mates.

"The reason I considered applying for the job as building director was because of my experience," he said. "I have been associated with architects and builders in my business for the last 20 years and thought I could do a good job for the village."

Koeppen owns Wheeling Paint and Glass, 1200 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights. Another store he owned in Skokie was closed late last year.

Koeppen is one of several village officials who have shown an interest in the building director post. Plan Commission Chairman Herbert Lortz and Electrical Comr. A. M. Mansukhani have submitted applications and are under consideration.

Kenneth R. Brady, a candidate on the Wheeling Representative Party slate, applied for the post last year, but withdrew his application after becoming a candidate.

THE POST WAS vacated by William Bleber a year ago today following his indictment by a federal grand jury. Originally Bleber took a leave of absence, but later resigned after pleading guilty to extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, perjury and filing a false income tax return in connection with a local builder shakedown scandal.

Since last April, Robert Kaminski, an electrical inspector, has been serving as acting building director. When a new director is hired, Kaminski will assume his former duties.

Village officials had hoped to fill the job has been open for a year, they do not feel there is any urgency to make an appointment.

"We've been wanting to get this thing filled, but it's not that urgent because Mr. Kaminski has been doing a fantastic job," Trustee Ronald Bruhn said. "Besides, there hasn't been a lot of building going on so we can afford to take a little longer."

Koeppen and Lang said they would prefer the new building director is hired after the completion of a report by a consulting firm which is doing a comprehensive study of village operations.

"I think now that we've waited so long we might as well wait and see what suggestions are made by the consulting firm relative to the building director job," Lang said. "We're paying the consulting firm and should see what they have to say so we can do the right thing."

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said all hiring and firing is handled by Passolt and that he does not know why a new building director has not been hired. "I think the village manager probably has a good reason for not having hired someone by now," he said.

'Resigned' Norman still in village prosecutor post

by JOE FRANZ

Donald Norman, Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who last summer submitted a letter of resignation as village prosecutor in Wheeling, is still on the job.

He said Thursday his resignation still stands, but that he has agreed to stay on until the village appoints a successor.

"I have not rescinded anything I said in writing or orally," he said. "But I told the village I would serve until I was replaced, and I meant that."

Village Mgr. George Passolt said he is considering applicants for the post and said Norman will be replaced when the interviews are completed.

"I've had a whole lot of applicants for this job," he said. "He (Norman) will continue to serve as village prosecutor until another person is appointed."

Passolt denied that Norman rescinded his resignation and would remain village prosecutor indefinitely. "I have not heard anything like that," he said. "I've got a resignation from him and that's all."

NORMAN, AN Arlington Heights attorney, has served as village prosecutor for more than eight years. In a letter to the village he said he was resigning because of other responsibilities.

"I'm not as busy now as I was when I submitted by resignation, but it still is effective," he said Thursday.

MSD threatens to file $200 million suit against city

and STEVE BROWN

Metropolitan Sanitary District trustees Thursday threatened to file a $200 million lawsuit against the City of Des Plaines if continued city protests delay funding approval for a sewage plant on the city's west side.

Allen S. Lavin, attorney for the district, was unanimously directed to file the damage suit if the city's current lawsuit against the sanitary district delays a decision by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency past the June 30 deadline for 1974-75 federal grants.

The threatened suit came a day after the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission decided to endorse the projected size of the plant despite a commission staff recommendation that the size of the plant be reduced.

LAVIN SAID THE $200 million damages asked in the suit would include the amount of grants the district stands to lose. A MSD spokesman said the district's concern about meeting the June 30 deadline for federal funds allocated for fiscal 1974-75 is based on a fear that while grant money is available now, it might not be next year.

"In the event we can't meet the deadline, the entire O'Hare basin project would have to be resubmitted and reconsidered for possible federal funding in subsequent fiscal years, subject to availability of federal funds," Lavin said.

The sanitary district is hoping federal funds will pay for about three-quarters of the $95 million plant.

The MSD suit also would seek compensatory damages for the increased cost of plant construction for each year construction is delayed, and punitive damages for "injury to public health" caused by the delay.

The city is attempting to control the design of the plant at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street through a local health ordinance.

WHILE MSD OFFICIALS were threatening Des Plaines, NIPC members were recommending federal approval of funding for the sewage plant even though information calling for a major reduction in the size of the plant had been given to the commissioners.

The Herald has learned that the commission decided to ignore a staff recommendation to allow construction of a plant that would treat no more than 60 million gallons of sewage per day. The MSD has designed the plant to handle about 72 million gallons of sewage at first and eventually treat 96 million gallons daily.

The reason for the difference in capacity sizes rests with projected population and industrial acreage development forecasts for the area that will be served by the plant. The projections made by NIPC show a smaller population in the area by the year 2030 and therefore a need for a smaller plant.

District officials agreed to accept an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency decision to use NIPC's population forecasts in several state and federal reports which are being prepared, but NIPC officials have not recommended a corresponding reduction in the size of the plant because of the change in population forecasts.

THE COMMISSION staff had forecast a population of about 350,000 persons living in the area by 2030, but the MSD reported a projected population of about 439,000 persons by the year 2030 with little growth after that.

Commission officials must approve the plans for the plant as a step toward obtaining federal funding.

Officially, the NIPC recommendation also decided to avoid any comment on questions regarding the environmental impact. The recommendation will be included in the environmental-impact statement being prepared by the district for review by the Illinois and U.S. environmental protection agencies.

The plant will receive sewage from seven Northwest suburbs through a deep tunnel system in Mount Prospect. The suburbs include Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

9 taken into custody in Elk Grove Village raid

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2623 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

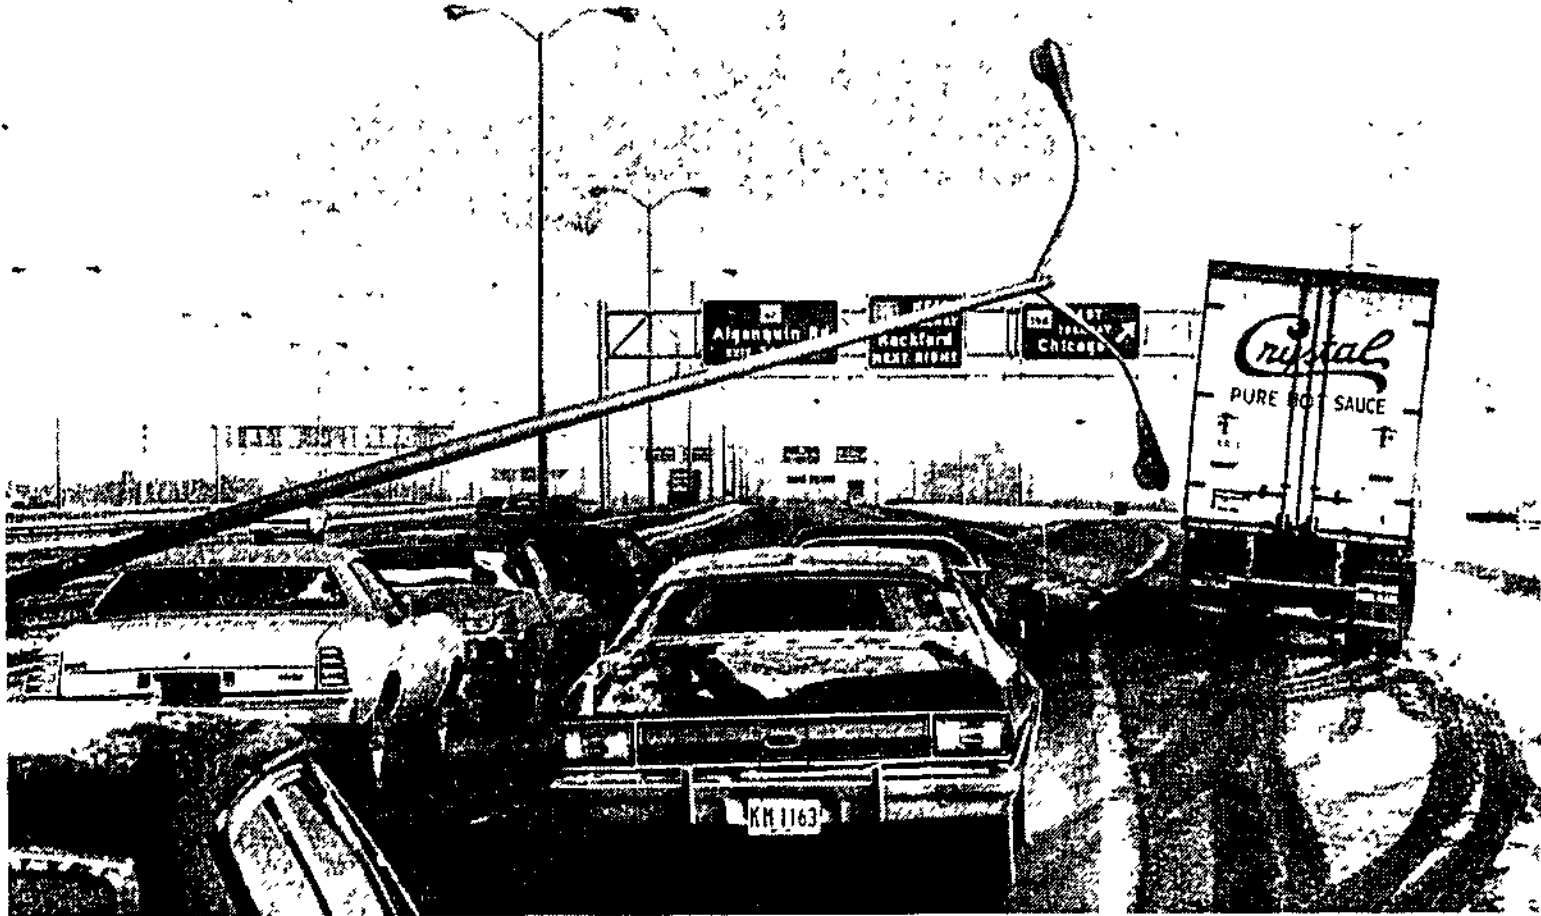

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center. The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill. It was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

Scouting news

You are a Scout, be proud of the way you look. Cubmaster Ken Niebuhr reminded the boys, at the January meeting of Pack 161, to be proud of their uniforms and to wear them at all meetings.

The annual Blue and Gold dinner will be held at the Elmhurst County Club Feb. 23 at 1 p.m. A family-style fried chicken dinner will be served. Tim Zaccard will entertain with a magic show following the dinner and awards presentations. Dinner registration forms must be returned with check or money to den leaders by Sunday. Dens are responsible for table decorations and they need a head count.

Two new Bobcats were taken into the pack. A total of 25 new Scouts have joined the pack in the last three months. The new Bobcats are Jeffrey Burhop and Paul Klingler.

The Bear badge, one gold and one silver arrow were awarded to John Roemisch of Den 10; Steve Scaturro, who recently came in as a Bobcat in Webelos Den 2 was awarded his Bear badge. Steve has earned his Wolf badge and den leaders by Sunday. Dens are responsible for table decorations and they need a head count.

ARROWS POINTS were presented to the following Scouts: Mark Lundgren, one gold and two silver arrows; William McCarthy, two silver arrows; and Eric Faltes, Tim Pierce and Mark Schaefer, one silver arrow.

One-year service pins and one-year perfect attendance pins were awarded to Tim Pierce and William McCarthy of Den 6. A recruiter badge was awarded to Eric Faltes of Den 5.

Bear Cub John Roemisch was advanced to a Webelos Den during a ceremony written and conducted by Webelos leader Jim O'Brien.

Receiving Webelos achievement awards were: Tom Brodinski, Keith Cembrowski, Matt Garr, Kevin Holden, Mark Lehman, Robert McLean, Larry O'Brien, Bill Parchim and Steve Scaturro, geologist; Mark Holzer, athlete; Louis Orlov II, aquanaut and geologist; Victor Ciummo, outdoorsman and scholar; Mark Funk, traveler, aquanaut and geologist.

PRIZES WERE awarded to the winners of the rocket derby. Races were held within each den to determine the fastest rocket. Then the first place winners from each den competed to determine the three fastest rockets in the pack. Each Scout who participated received an appropriate ribbon. Winners were: Den 4, first, Jeff Janczek (5th in pack); second, Nick Deluca; Den 5, first, Jim Gordon (4th in pack); second, Allen White, Jr.; Den 6, first, Tim Pierce (7th in pack); second, Robert Gorny; Den 7, first Tom Cannon (2nd in pack); second John Kukula; Den 8, first, Scott Becker (8th in pack); second, Artie Carlos; Den 10, first, Jim Haaker (6th in pack); second, John Roemisch; Webelos Den 1, first, Bob McLean (1st in pack); second, Victor Ciummo; Webelos Den 2, first, Matthew Garr (3rd in pack); second, Larry O'Brien.

A trophy for 1st place pack winner was awarded to Bob McLean; Tom Cannon received a silver medal for 2nd place; Matt Garr a bronze medal for 3rd place.

Judith Mieszala, sustaining membership enrollment chairman, or one of her helpers will be contacting all the families in the pack. All money collected for membership goes directly to support the Boy Scouts of America.

Marie Casimer, chairman of the Tom Wat sales, passes out the prizes to those boys who worked so hard to earn them.

Auto rams into house; none injured

An auto crashed into a house at 60 N. Cumberland Pkwy., Des Plaines, Wednesday causing minor damage to the house but no serious injuries.

The driver, Centa Nüeslein, 50, of 118 Westgate Rd., told police she lost control of the car while she was turning left from Meyer Court onto Cumberland Parkway. The car ran off the roadway and the woman told police her brakes failed to work.

The car drove through a brick wall into the interior of the house, tearing up the lawn from the curb to the front of the building and causing minor damage to some furniture and shrubbery in front of the house, police said.

Police said the auto was equipped with both a left and right-foot accelerator pedal. The left pedal was covered by a plastic floor mat and a small throw rug, causing the pedal to be depressed, police said.

Police said the driver sustained a cut lip in the accident but no charges were placed against her.

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track, it was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $35 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clabour of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clabour said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clabour said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings, but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was 1½ or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clabour said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 7,000-unit

housing development on race-track property.

Clabour said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 80-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

'Referendum should decide use for U.S. housing funds'

by LUISA GINETTI

More than 60 persons, many of whom are opposed to the creation of low-and moderate-income housing in Des Plaines, turned out Thursday night for the final public hearing on the city's application for federal funds available under the U. S. Housing and Community Development Act.

Several speakers at the hearing said the decision on the city's application for the $139,000 it is entitled to receive during the first year of the program should be made by a voter referendum and not by vote of the City Council.

John Martin, 263 N. Cedar St., said a referendum would let the people decide how their city is to be run.

"We should have an election to determine if the people want it," Martin said. "We can't let a handful of influential people seek the destruction of this city."

EDWARD GRABILL, 265 Arlington Ave., said the development of low-and moderate-income housing in the city would affect the crime and vandalism rate as well as property values.

"Des Plaines will erode if we accept the argument that low-cost housing will be a benefit," Grabill said. "We live in a world of high-cost housing and it would be a step backward to accept the program as it is proposed."

Meditation lecture Tuesday

A free introductory lecture on transcendental meditation will be presented at the Des Plaines Public Library at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The lecture, open to the public, is presented by the International Meditation Society. For information call 398-7153.

One speaker, Michael Dzurisin, 361 Pinehurst Dr., was booed by the crowd when she suggested that all homeowners in the city are in a sense subsidized in their share of real estate taxes because of the large share of taxes paid by industry.

"Turning our backs on housing means turning our backs on our neighbors," Mrs. Dzurisin said.

Clifford Scherer, 194 Norman Ct., a candidate for alderman in the 4th Ward, spoke in favor of applying for the funds. Scherer said there are many projects for which the federal money could be used, including the acquisition of historical property, housing code enforcement, special projects to aid the elderly and handicapped and to improve wells and water mains in the city.

"We have contributed to the federal coffers far more than we have taken out," Scherer said. "It is our money and it's our decision."

THE AUDIENCE AT Thursday's hearing represented the largest crowd to attend any of the three public hearings conducted during the past two months. The task force preparing the city's application for the federal funds spent $1,400 to prepare a flyer which went to every home in the city last week notifying residents of the meeting.

The task force plans to complete its work on the application next week so the city council may act on it at its Feb. 18 meeting.

If the application is approved by the council, it must be sent to the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) by March 1 for review. After NIPC reviews the application, it must be filed with the U. S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, (HUD) which will make the final decision on accepting or rejecting the application.

The deadline for filing the application with HUD is April 15.

Maine West band concert Sunday

The Maine West High School midwinter band concert will be presented at 3 p.m. Sunday in the auditorium of the school, 1755 S. Wolf Rd.

Featured groups include the combined cadet intermediate band, the concert band, the jazz combo and the jazz band.

The cadet band will play "Kiefer's Special," Carter's "Symphonic Overture," Dillon's "Quartz Mountain," and Playhar's "Beguine for Shimmering Flutes."

The concert band performance includes Giovanni's "Jubilance," Mozart's

"Overture to the Magic Flute," Tiedor's "Amperito Roca," Sousa's "Washington Post March" and Keenan's "Night Soliloquy."

The jazz combo will play "Cuernavaca" and "Misty" and the jazz band will perform "Gotta Get Away," "Dirty Fork," and "Caroline Encounters Tom Swift and His Marvelous Electric Jazz Rock Machine."

Admission is $1 for adults and 75 cents for students. Music booster cards and Golden Ager passes will be honored.

Underwood 'interested' in schools job

Kenneth Underwood, former superintendent of the West Virginia school system that erupted in a book-banning controversy, said Thursday he "would always be interested in a job in the North-west suburbs."

Underwood, reached at his West Virginia home, said he did not know if he would accept the position of superintendent of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 if it were offered.

Underwood, 48, was superintendent of Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 from 1964-68. His name was submitted by Dist. 59 board member Judy Zanca to the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to be investigated as a possible candidate for the Dist. 59 superintendent's post.

"I don't have any idea what I'm going to do," Underwood said. "Right now, after what's happened, I'm just sitting back and enjoying life."

"My wife and I will be doing a lot of thinking over the next month and hope to make a decision on what we're going to be doing about March 1."

UNDERWOOD gained national prominence last fall when he became involved in a book-banning protest by parents in the Kanawha County, W. Va., school system, where he was superintendent. He resigned Jan. 31.

A screening committee of the state school boards association recently was hired by the district to conduct a nationwide search for a new superintendent.

The committee is expected to submit a list of five or six candidates for the job in about two months.

Underwood previously served as superintendent in a North Dakota school system.

Camera Club to view slides

A slide show on New Zealand will be presented at Monday's meeting of the Des Plaines Camera Club by Lester Peterson. Peterson has traveled to many parts of the world, including Antarctica.

The public is invited to attend the meeting at 8 p.m. at the Des Plaines Public Library.

Blood program contemplated

Maine Township is trying to organize a blood-replacement program for the residents of the township's unincorporated area.

Township officials will hear a presentation from a Blood Center representative at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 11, before the regular monthly township board meeting.

The plan would seek voluntary monthly blood donations equal to a percentage of the total residents of the unincorporated area.

Invitations have been sent to church leaders and the presidents of homeowners groups and PTA's in the area. Civic leaders and citizens interested in the program may call the Maine Township office, 297-2510.

Tax bills due March 1

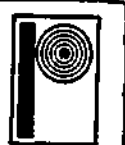

Maine Township Collector Roy Bergquist has issued a reminder to township residents that 1974 real estate bills have been mailed, and that the first installment is due March 1.

Payments not received by the due date are subject by law to a monthly penalty charge. The initial payment is an estimated sum equal to approximately 50 per cent of the total bill.

The second and final installment will be due sometime later this autumn. The date will be announced later by the county.

Bergquist said that pending the outcome of a court case, the bills should be paid directly to the Cook County collector. However, his office is available for information and assistance. Maine Township residents who have not received a tax bill or who have questions concerning payment may call Bergquist at the township office, 297-2510, or at his law offices, 963-8565.

Officials huddle on Bears' stadium for Arlington

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track, it was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $33 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clarbourn of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

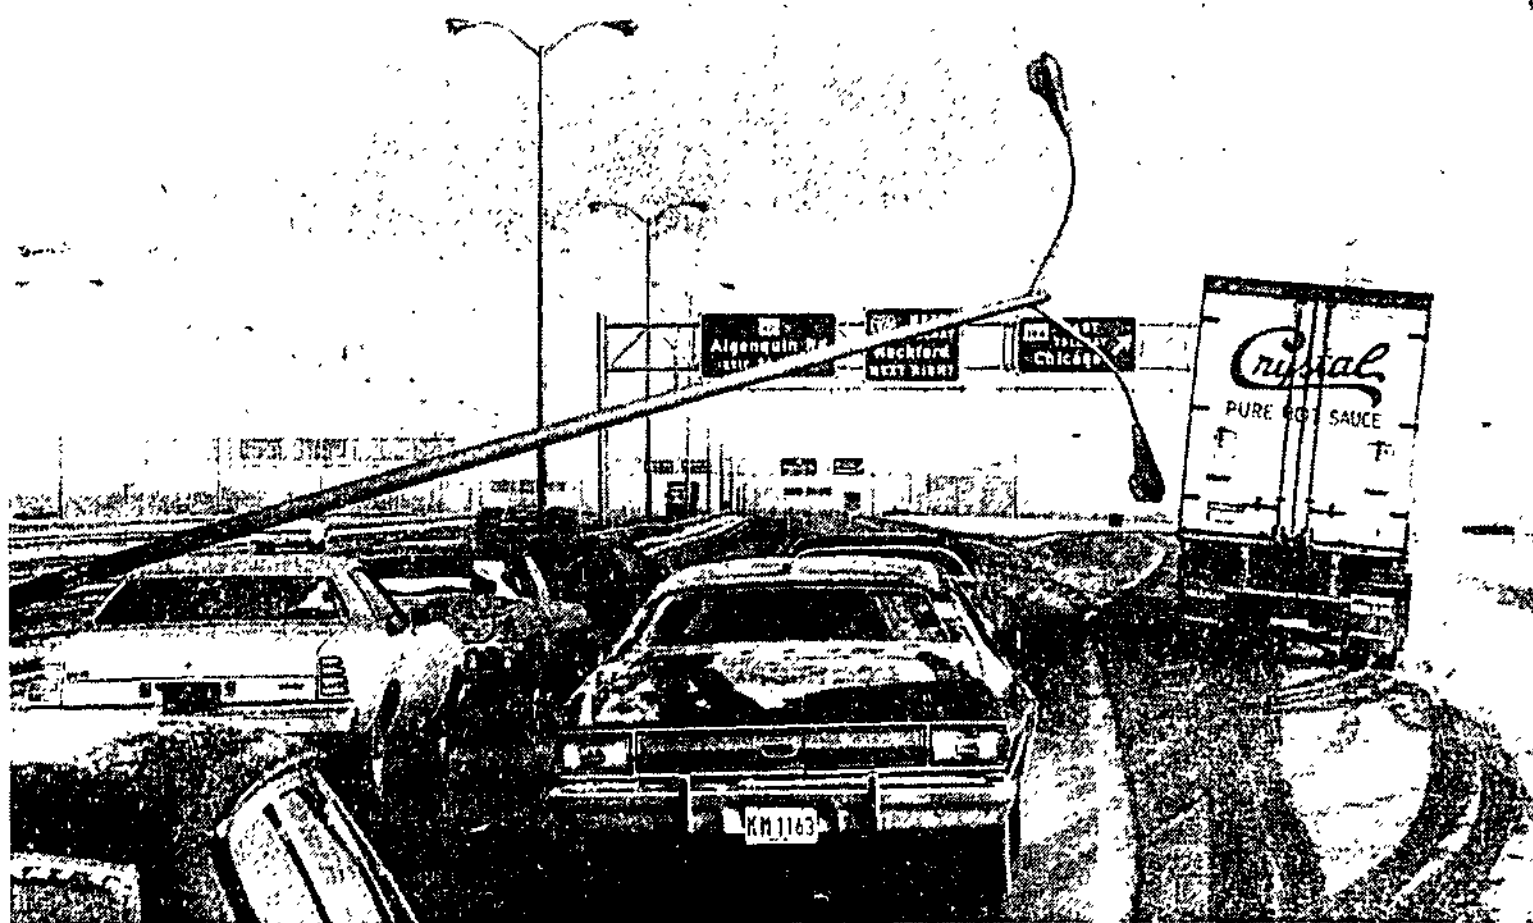

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center, The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill, it was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

Lincoln sets communication talk Thursday

Clete Hinton

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15

The Lincoln School PTA will offer its third presentation Thursday in a year-long series on "Improving Communication Between Parents and Children."

Clete Hinton, counselor at Harper College, will talk in "Communicating Meaningful Values" at 7:30 p.m. in the commons of the school, 1021 Ridgewood Ln., Palatine. Hinton suggests that if parents can clarify their values and "know what they want to communicate" to children, the family can become more purposeful, enthusiastic, positive, and aware of what is worth striving for.

Wheeling-Elmhurst Dist. 21

There will be a ski trip Wednesday to Wilmot Mountain Wis., for students and teachers at Lincoln Junior High School. Students will leave London at 1:30 p.m. and return at 11 p.m. Cost of the trip is $13, which includes the tow ticket, equipment rental, 1 1/2-hour lesson and transportation. The cost of the two tickets and bus is $6 for those who do not need equipment or the lesson. Reservations must be made in advance with Kathy Weber.

Hamburger day will be Tuesday for students and staff at Field School, 31 St. Armand Ln., Wheeling. Lunch costs 60 cents.

Reservoir project delayed again

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Construction of a reservoir to deter flooding in Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights has been delayed again, this time because of difficulties in obtaining the site.

Forrest C. Neil, chief engineer for the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD), said Thursday the district has not been able to buy the land it needs to build the stormwater reservoir at Central and Busse roads.

Neil delayed MSD board of trustees approval of a reservoir agreement with the two villages Thursday because he said he wanted to report to the board about problems in the acquisition of the land for the basin.

Although the district already has bought 26.7 acres, another 42.3 acres must be purchased before the basin can be built.

LAST YEAR MSD engineers blamed the two villages for delaying negotiations on the basin project. The two villages and the MSD have been trying to reach an agreement since August 1973.

Both villages approved the agreement in December.

While there is little doubt that the MSD will eventually get the land because the district can resort to condemnation, the problems in negotiating for the land purchase could delay the basin construction even more.

The basin, which would hold only storm sewage, not combined sanitary and storm sewage, would be built by the MSD. The two local villages in the agreement would cover any costs over $1.3 million for the construction and would be required to maintain the basin and to improve local sewers leading to the basin to keep sanitary sewage out of it.

Once the O'Hare Water Reclamation plant construction is finished and the system of underground tunnels is completed to collect combined sewage, the MSD plans to enlarge the Central and Busse basin and make it a holding basin for combined sewage. But that may be 10 years off, and officials of the two villages said in 1973 they wanted to see a part of the basin built sooner to help combat flooding.

While there is little doubt that the MSD will eventually get the land because the district can resort to condemnation, the problems in negotiating for the land purchase could delay the basin construction even more.

WHILE HOLDING off on the basin approval, MSD officials Thursday said they have begun to acquire easements for the paths of the tunnels which will run under Mount Prospect to carry the sewage to the O'Hare plant.

The MSD paid $300 to Richard and Carlotta Kozak for an easement under their property at the southeast corner of William and Isabella streets in Mount Prospect and $200 to a trust held by the First Arlington National Bank for an easement under the northeast corner of Oakton Street and Higgins Road in Elk Grove Township.

The money went to 1880 Snacktime Inc., a restaurant at the corner which burned down a year ago. Beneficiary of the trust is John Kouzoukos, MSD officials said.

The MSD received a third permit to build the tunnel system free from the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

The permit allows the district to build tunnels along the west side of Elmhurst Road from the Northwest Tollway to Manawa Trail and across Central Road at Weller Lane.

2nd time in 8 days

Cleaners clerk robbed

A man robbed a clerk at Holiday Cleaners, 412 W. Northwest Hwy., for the second time in eight days early Thursday, Mount Prospect police said.

Police said the robber did not display a gun although he motioned with his hand in his pocket as if he had one. He made off with $50.25 Thursday. On Jan. 30, the same robber stole $41 from the same clerk.

Police said the robber was a white male, aged 17 to 18. The first robbery occurred at 1:34 p.m.; the second, at 8:17 a.m. The robber was armed with an automatic pistol during the first robbery, police said.

Cameras, jewelry

stolen from store

Schaumburg police are investigating the theft of about $12,000 worth of cameras and jewelry from Unity Buying Service, 905 E. Golf Rd.

The theft was discovered Wednesday when an employee noticed a camera was missing from a display case. About 200 rings and settings were stolen along with three cameras, police were told.

Police said they found small pry marks on the lock to one of the display cases.

Police also are searching for a 1974 model station wagon reported stolen Wednesday night from the Woodfield Shopping Center. The vehicle, valued at $7,000, is owned by Jeffrey Allen, 3510 Tamworth Pl., Schaumburg. The station wagon was parked on the upper level outside the Lord & Taylor store.

$1,000 in photography

gear taken from inn

An estimated $1,000 worth of photography equipment was reported stolen from a guest room at the Holiday Inn, 1000 Busse Rd., Elk Grove Village.

Jerry Gillis of Benton Harbor, Mich., a guest at the inn, discovered two cameras, a strobe light, three lenses and several cases missing when he returned to his room at 11 p.m. Wednesday, police said.

Gillis told police he locked his door when he left the room at about 9 a.m. Wednesday. There were no signs of forced entry.

MSD threatens Des Plaines with $200 million lawsuit

and STEVE BROWN

Metropolitan Sanitary District trustees Thursday threatened to file a $200 million lawsuit against the City of Des Plaines if continued city protests delay funding approval for a sewage plant on the city's west side.

Allen S. Lavin, attorney for the district, was unanimously directed to file the damage suit if the city's current lawsuit against the sanitary district delays a decision by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency past the June 30 deadline for 1974-75 federal grants.

The threatened suit came a day after the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission decided to endorse the projected size of the plant despite a commission staff recommendation that the size of the plant be reduced.

LAVIN SAID THE $200 million damages asked in the suit would include the amount of grants the district stands to lose. A MSD spokesman said the district's concern about meeting the June 30 deadline for federal funds allocated for fiscal 1974-75 is based on a fear that while grant money is available now, it might not be next year.

"In the event we can't meet the deadline, the entire O'Hare basin project would have to be resubmitted and reconsidered for possible federal funding in subsequent fiscal years, subject to availability of federal funds," Lavin said.

The sanitary district is hoping federal funds will pay for about three-quarters of the $95 million plant.

The MSD suit also would seek compensatory damages for the increased cost of plant construction for each year construction is delayed, and punitive damages for "injury to public health" caused by the delay.

The city is attempting to control the design of the plant at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street through a local health ordinance.

WHILE MSD OFFICIALS were threatening Des Plaines, NIPC members were recommending federal approval of funding for the sewage plant even though information calling for a major reduction in the size of the plant had been given to the commissioners.

The Herald has learned that the commission decided to ignore a staff recommendation to allow construction of a plant that would treat no more than 60 million gallons of sewage per day. The MSD has designed the plant to handle about 72 million gallons of sewage at first and eventually treat 96 million gallons daily.

The reason for the difference in capacity sizes rests with projected population and industrial acreage development forecasts for the area that will be served by the plant. The projections made by NIPC show a smaller population in the area by the year 2030 and therefore a need for a smaller plant.

District officials agreed to accept an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency decision to use NIPC's population forecasts in several state and federal reports which are being prepared, but NIPC officials have not recommended a corresponding reduction in the size of the plant because of the change in population forecasts.

THE COMMISSION staff had forecast a population of about 350,000 persons living in the area by 2030, but the MSD reported a projected population of about 439,000 persons by the year 2000 with little growth after that.

Commission officials must approve the plans for the plant as a step toward obtaining federal funding.

Officially, the NIPC recommendation also decided to avoid any comment on questions regarding the environmental impact. The recommendation will be included in the environmental-impact statement being prepared by the district for review by the Illinois and U.S. environmental protection agencies.

The plant will receive sewage from seven Northwest suburbs through a deep tunnel system in Mount Prospect. The suburbs include Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

Underwood 'interested' in schools post here

Kenneth Underwood, former superintendent of the West Virginia school system that erupted in a book-banning controversy, said Thursday he "would always be interested in a job in the Northwest suburbs."

Underwood, reached at his West Virginia home, said he did not know if he would accept the position of superintendent of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 if it were offered.

Underwood, 46, was superintendent of Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 from 1964-66. His name was submitted by Dist. 59 board member Judy Zanca to the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to be investigated as a possible candidate for the Dist. 59 superintendent's post.

"I don't have any idea what I'm going to do," Underwood said. "Right now, after what's happened, I'm just sitting back and enjoying life."

"My wife and I will be doing a lot of thinking over the next month and hope to make a decision on what we're going to be doing about March 1."

UNDERWOOD gained national prominence last fall when he became involved in a book-banning protest by parents in the Kanawha County, W. Va., school system, where he was superintendent. He resigned Jan. 31.

A screening committee of the state school boards association recently was hired by the district to conduct a nationwide search for a new superintendent.

The committee is expected to submit a list of five or six candidates for the job in about two months.

Underwood previously served as superintendent in a North Dakota school system.

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Airport site possibilities down to two

Sites for an expanded airport in Schaumburg have been narrowed to the present private field and one other place of property in DuPage County.

"About 15 potential sites were eliminated because the property was zoned for other purposes," said Fred Dietrich, chairman of the mass-transit committee.

In a report to the committee this week, consultants engaged in the $38,000 airport study concluded that the most appropriate sites would be either the present 150-acre airport on W. Irving Park Road or a 340-acre parcel south of the Milwaukee Road west suburban commuter line near Springguth Road.

Dietrich said he believes the DuPage County site will be ruled out because the extension of Springguth Road and an interchange with the proposed Elgin-O'Hare Expressway is planned.

THE VILLAGE HAS retained Howard, Needles, Tammen and Bergendoff, Chicago engineering consultants, to do the federally-funded feasibility study on expanding the airport and operating it as a municipal airport.

Dietrich said the study so far has determined that "there is more demand for the airfield than present capacity can handle." The airport has a 3,000-foot east-west landing strip, which could be expanded to at least 4,000 feet.

But Dietrich stressed that the airport will not be able to accommodate more than "light craft" of a maximum of 8,000 pounds.

Public hearings, tentatively scheduled for early summer, will be held when the study has been completed.

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track, it was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $35 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clabour of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clabour said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clabour said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings, but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was 14 or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clabour said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 5,000-unit

housing development on race-track property.

Clabour said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 80-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

9 taken into custody in Elk Grove Village raid

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

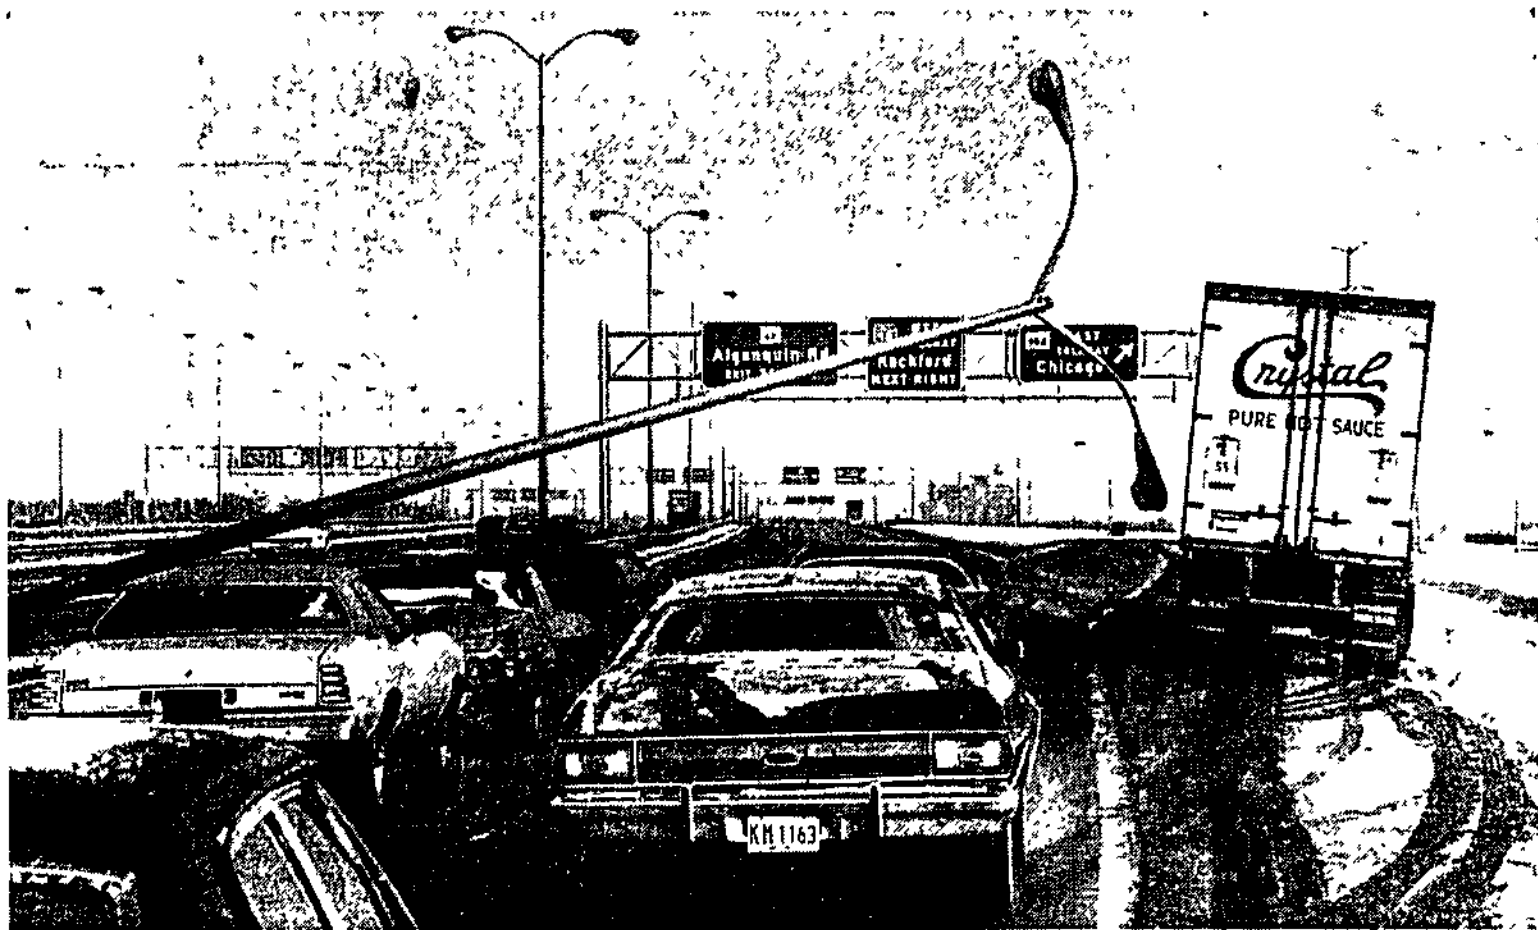

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center. The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill. It was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

W. Va. book-ban figure

Underwood coy on schools job

Kenneth Underwood, former superintendent of the West Virginia school system that erupted in a book-banning controversy, said Thursday he "would always be interested in a job in the North-west suburbs."

Underwood, reached at his West Virginia home, said he did not know if he would accept the position of superintendent of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 if it were offered.

Underwood, 46, was superintendent of Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 from 1964-68. His name was submitted by Dist. 59 board member Judy Zanca to the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to be investigated as a possible candidate for the Dist. 59 superintendent's post.

"I don't have any idea what I'm going to do," Underwood said. "Right now, after what's happened, I'm just sitting back and enjoying life."

"My wife and I will be doing a lot of thinking over the next month and hope to make a decision on what we're going to be doing about March 1."

UNDERWOOD gained national prominence last fall when he became involved in a book-banning protest by parents in the Kanawha County, W. Va., school system, where he was superintendent. He resigned Jan. 31.

A screening committee of the state school boards association recently was hired by the district to conduct a nationwide search for a new superintendent.

The committee is expected to submit a list of five or six candidates for the job in about two months.

Underwood previously served as superintendent in a North Dakota school system.

Death in crash ruled accident by coroner

The death of a Palatine Township woman who suffered fatal injuries Jan. 29 when a Schaumburg squad car crashed head-on with her auto was ruled accidental by a County Coroner's jury Thursday.

The inquest into the death of Christine Lovan, 21, of 1079 N. Deer Ave., was held at the Oehler Funeral Home in Des Plaines.

Sidney Berman, a deputy coroner, said, "I am quite sure that the operator of the vehicle (Patrolman David Mabbitt) did not use the proper care and caution in operating his vehicle. However, I do not believe that not exercising that care and caution is tantamount to criminal negligence."

"But being a police officer, he sets an example and at all times should exercise that care and caution," he added.

Mabbitt, the squad-car driver, did not testify at the inquest. The accident occurred on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street, Schaumburg. The squad car was passing a slower moving vehicle on Roselle Road and swinging back into its lane of traffic when it sideswiped a car and crashed into the Lovan vehicle, police said.

Mabbitt has been placed on suspension pending a fire and police commission hearing Feb. 22 on a departmental charge concerning care of equipment. He also is scheduled to appear March 12 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court on a charge of improper passing.

Man charged after scuffle with police

A Schaumburg man is slated to appear March 19 in the Schaumburg branch of Circuit Court for slapping a patrolman into a wall and scuffling with two other policemen who responded to a family disturbance call.

Raymon L. Burkett, 37, of 1401 Concord Ln., was charged with two counts of battery and one of resisting arrest.

Three policemen went to the Burkett home Wednesday night to arrest Burkett for struggling with his wife, Emaline, police said. Burkett grabbed Patrolman John Mueller and pushed him into the wall and then scuffled with Sgt. Fred Schmidt and Patrolman Roger Peter, police said.

Police said Mueller suffered a back injury, Schmidt an arm injury and Peter a minor eye injury. None of them were hospitalized.

Burkett was released after posting $1,000 bond.

Car stalls on C&NW tracks; woman unhurt

A Schaumburg woman escaped injury Wednesday night when her car stalled and was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. train at the Colfax Street and Quentin Road crossing in Palatine.

Janice A. Boatman, 10, of 1410 N. Valley Lake Dr., was northbound on Quentin Road when the eastbound train struck the passenger side of her car.

In a separate accident, two cars collided on Palatine Road, east of Elmwood Avenue.

Lee J. Flodin, 20, of 828 Old Willow Rd., Wheeling, was eastbound on Palatine Road when his car collided with a car driven by Steve Eastman, 30, of 627 E. Palatine Rd., police said.

Flodin was treated for a head injury and released from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

Flodin was ticketed by Palatine police for failure to reduce speed to prevent an accident, and Eastman was ticketed for improper backing out of his driveway. Both men are scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights Branch of Circuit Court March 6.

Nab Roselle youths for lawn vandalism

Schaumburg police believe they have solved the recent lawn vandalism incidents in the Meadow Knolls subdivision by arresting two 16-year-old Roselle youths Wednesday riding around on lawn tractors with attached snow plows.

The youths were arrested at 135 E. Monterey Ave. after a complaint by a resident, police said. The teen-agers later told police they had driven the tractors over other lawns in the area, authorities said.

The two were released to the custody of their parents pending a background review by the police department's juvenile division.

Card party Saturday

Schaumburg United Party's Women's Auxiliary will hold its annual card party from 8 p.m. to midnight Saturday at St. Marcelline's Social Center, 820 S. Spring-Inglut Rd.

Cards, dice and scorepads will be provided and blackjack tables also will be available, an auxiliary spokesman said.

Cost is $2.50 per person, $5 per couple and $1.50 for senior citizens. Tickets will be available at the door.

Proceeds will be used for auxiliary operating expenses and the 1975 Schaumburg United Party campaign fund, the spokesman added.

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Present field and DuPage County tract

Sites for airport expansion down to two

Sites for an expanded airport in Schaumburg have been narrowed to the present private field and one other piece of property in DuPage County.

"About 15 potential sites were eliminated because the property was zoned for other purposes," said Fred Dietrich, chairman of the mass-transit committee.

In a report to the committee this week, consultants engaged in the $56,000 airport study concluded that the most appropriate sites would be either the present 150-acre airport on W. Irving Park Road or a 340-acre parcel south of the Milwaukee Road west suburban commuter line near Springinguth Road.

Dietrich said he believes the DuPage County site will be ruled out because the extension of Springinguth Road and an interchange with the proposed Elgin-O'Hare Expressway is planned.

THE VILLAGE HAS retained Howard, Needles, Tammen and Bergendoff, Chicago engineering consultants, to do the federally-funded feasibility study on expanding the airport and operating it as a municipal airport.

Dietrich said the study so far has determined that "there is more demand for the airfield than present capacity can handle." The airport has a 3,000-foot east-west landing strip, which could be expanded to at least 4,000 feet.

But Dietrich stressed that the airport will not be able to accommodate more than "light craft" of a maximum of 8,000 pounds.

Public hearings, tentatively scheduled for early summer, will be held when the study has been completed.

GOP to adopt platform tonight

Adoption of the platform on which three Republican candidates will run for the Hoffman Estates Village Board is expected tonight.

The platform will be voted on when Republican Party members meet at 8 p.m. at party headquarters, 839 W. Higgins Rd.

Trustee William Cowin, plan commissioner William Palmer and Jeanne M. Pavey are slated as Republican candidates.

The three are the only candidates to enter the race. William Dooley, 104 Gentry Ct., who has said he will run as an independent, has not filed petitions. The deadline is Monday.

The platform to be voted upon was drafted by a party committee headed by Trustee Dyrle Rathman.

Any Republican resident of the village may attend the meeting to vote on the platform. Following the vote on the platform, the Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township will hold its regular monthly meeting.

Cameras, jewelry stolen from store

Schaumburg police are investigating the theft of about $12,000 worth of cameras and jewelry from Unity Buying Service, 905 E. Golf Rd.

The theft was discovered Wednesday when an employee noticed a camera was missing from a display case. About 200 rings and settings were stolen along with three cameras, police were told.

Police said they found small pry marks on the lock to one of the display cases.

Police also are searching for a 1974 model station wagon reported stolen Wednesday night from the Woodfield Shopping Center. The vehicle, valued at $7,000, is owned by Jeffrey Allen, 3510 Tamworth Pl., Schaumburg. The station wagon was parked on the upper level outside the Lord & Taylor store.

Settlement hopes for K&B suits fade

Hopes for settlement of two lawsuits involving Kaufman and Broad Homes Inc., the Village of Hoffman Estates and the Barrington Square Improvement Assn. appear to have dimmed again.

The two suits, one filed by K&B against the village and the other by the homeowners' group against K&B, were to have come up in court again this week. But the suit against the village has been put off until April 9 and the suit involving the homeowners is expected to be continued today by Circuit Court Judge Nathan Cohen.

The suits stem from the 1968 bribery scandal in which K&B paid six former village officials to approve zoning for the Barrington Square complex near Barrington and Higgins roads.

The suit against the village was filed after the village refused to issue further building permits for the K&B development. The village took the action, charging the development provided the company with "unfair profits."

THE HOMEOWNERS filed suit against the company charging the price of their units was inflated to cover the costs of bribing the former village officials.

Settlement of the homeowners' suit reportedly was close last month when homeowners' attorney William Davies said only minor details remained to be worked out. Davies said settlement terms included the company performing certain repairs in the complex.

But a spokesman for Davies said Thursday the attorney is hospitalized and has requested a 30 day postponement of the case.

Settlement of the homeowners' suit is being sought by K&B before it proceeds with the village suit. K&B attorney Thomas Foran said last week resolution of the case could come by this week, but only if settlement of the homeowners' suit came quickly.

Village officials have said they have not been contacted by Foran for several months.

Library to be open Sundays

The Schaumburg Township Public Library will be open Sundays throughout the year and will extend its daily hours to 10 p.m. beginning March 1.

The additional hours were approved after the library board voted this week to include $6,000 extra in salaries in the 1975-76 budget. The new budget for the year to start March 1 is $365,000, an increase of 26 per cent over the current budget of $450,000.

The library will tax at its present rate of 15 cents per $100 of equalized assessed valuation. Additional revenue is expected from the large increase in the assessed valuation of the township.

MICHAEL MADDEN, head librarian, said the library will be able to acquire about 55 per cent more material this year than last. Budgeted for the new fiscal year for books and other materials is $64,700.

The budget will be submitted Thursday to the township board to be included with the other township budgets. By law, the township board must approve the library budget.

Madden compiled a list of library goals for the new fiscal year. They include:

- Development of the community resource and organization file.
- More materials for career planning.
- Major expansion of the adult-book section.
- Study and initiation of an outreach program for the township's senior citizens.
- Feasibility of a Dial-a-Story system.
- Expansion of the library's public-information program.

Pirates get 2nd shot at North frontrunners

A Herald staff report

The North Division's front-running and unbeaten Arlington Cardinals will put their 9-0 record on the line against physical Palatine (4-6) tonight in the circuit headline to be carried live by WWSM-FM, 92.7, at 8 p.m.

Elsewhere in the division, 1-9 Hersey will rekindle its rivalry with 7-2 Wheeling while 6-4 Buffalo Grove challenges host Fremd (3-7) with all games scheduled for 8 p.m.

The Palatine Pirates should be ready for their basketball rematch with Arlington. The memory of a close, eight-point loss in January should be fresh in the Pirates' minds.

But when Palatine visits the Cardinals tonight, coach Ron Finck's Pirates should be at the top of their game. They seemed to put everything together Tuesday when they defeated Fremd, 66-58.

Leading the assault was 6-5 senior Mark Mara, who strengthened his position as the MSL's second-highest scorer with 32 points. Mara is averaging 20.5 for 10 league games.

Palatine showed an inflexible zone defense which held Fremd to just 18 second-half points. The Vikings simply failed to move the ball inside against the shifting Palatine defense.

The Pirates got good efforts from Tom Iuorio, Chris Burrus, Jim Maycan, and Art Stevenson as they moved the ball well against Fremd's touted full-court press.

It was the Pirates' relative ease in South basketball preview inside handling Fremd's pressure that has Arlington head coach George Zigman worried. The Cardinals thrive in keeping the opposition off balance with a full-court press and Zigman feels it has to be a factor against Palatine to help offset the Pirates' physical advantage.

"We have to come ready to play," he warned, "and hope our quickness can neutralize their strength on the boards. We also have to defense Mara down low and (Kevin) McKenna's outside shooting."

The Palatine pair combined for 39 of the team's 58 points in the first encounter.

Arlington will counter with its senior starting quintet of Jerry DeSimone, Mike Fogel, Terry Donahue, Denny Gaare and John Yenzel.

Fremd remembers the last meeting with Buffalo Grove like it was yesterday. The Vikings went to Buffalo Grove in hopes of a victory over a younger Bison team.

When the shooting had stopped, the Vikings had been drilled 85-61. They were shellshocked.

"We played an excellent game against Fremd last time," said Paul Grady, the Bison coach. "I hope we can do it again."

Keying the Bison win last month was the combination of Brian Allsmiller and Mike Ledna. Allsmiller poured in 28, many coming on brilliant job passes from Ledna. Ledna also had time to score 15.

Fremd must somehow eliminate the Ledna jobs on defense as well as block out the taller Bison on the boards. Buffalo Grove had too many second and third tries in the January meeting.

The Vikings, now four games below the .500 mark (7-11), are smarting after losing to crosstown rival Palatine in the final minutes Tuesday night. They can still salvage .500 season, but the long road back must begin tonight.

Buffalo Grove, 11-7 overall, has been able to maintain its poise in several tight games recently. "It makes me feel that we're continuing to mature," said Grady.

The Wheeling Wildcats go into tonight's game against Hersey looking like the cat that came away with a mouthful of feathers — and that's all. As close as they get, the "Cats" can't do more than ruffle the plumage of the Redbirds — er, the first-place Cardinals of Arlington.

Both teams are looking forward to next Tuesday's rematch at Wheeling, but Ted Ecker's Wildcats must contend with Hersey's Huskies first.

TAKING A PASS from Sandra Norton (40) is Hoffman Estates teammate Hilary Dyer during play Wednesday night at the Hawks' gym. Putting pressure on Dyer is Fremd's Colleen Cannon. Fremd's press proved too much for Hoffman to handle in losing 65-44. Cannon scored 14 and Norton had 10. Story on page 2.

What did you do last weekend?

There are those days when it is an effort just to move out of the chair.

There are those weekends...

That's the way it was last weekend, and that's why I spent my time in such places as North Carolina, California, Hawaii, Nevada and Florida.

This was all compliments of television and for somebody who grew up in the era of radio, I still find this medium, color and all, a little hard to believe. I traveled around the country Saturday and Sunday and didn't leave the house.

It all started at noon Saturday when Maryland tipped North Carolina State in a tremendous college basketball game. This may not be used in the classroom to teach the defensive game, but if you enjoy fast-paced action, and superb offensive basketball, it was a beauty.

I do wonder what it takes to get those announcers excited. The game was superb, but I thought I was listening to Pat Summerall and Kyle Rote team up for the Bluebonnet Bowl.

High school basketball followed on NBC, but I spend six days each week with the preps. I immediately switched the dial to WGN-TV at 2 p.m. to see how my alma mater, the University of Illinois, was going to look against Michigan State. It didn't take long.

I switched to the professional bowlers show at 2:30 p.m. People can say all they want about bowling and its image of the past, but I still find this Saturday event one of the most appealing sports shows on television. It was superb entertainment again Saturday as Mark Roth rolled 11 straight strikes in the championship game but missed a $10,000 bonus and new car when a stubborn four pin stood on the final shot.

One reason for the television success of bowling is the confined area of competition and predictable flow of action. You win and you advance. You lose and you're out.

It still boggles the mind that I can sit and watch figure skating, but Wide World and the Olympics have given this sport a tremendous boost. The names are familiar now, and you can't deny that the performances are spectacular.

Is there such a thing as an ugly figure skater? They all must do toothpaste commercials.

I remember McKay, who even makes a demolition derby sound fascinating, as a court reporter on an old CBS production, "The Verdict Is Yours." He now has graduated to the all-time fantasy job, a position aspired to by every sports-loving, right-thinking American.

The longevity of the Wide World concept, "spanning the globe bringing you the constant variety of sport," is really an accident in sports. It was introduced in April of 1961, merely as a summer replacement. And its first show was dual coverage of the Penn and Drake Relays. The Penn telecast almost washed out in a heavy rain, killing Wide World before it began.

When rain forced postponement Saturday of the Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament from Honolulu, I had a rest from the tube. Indiana played Ohio State on Channel 44 in the evening, but nothing drags me away from the Mary Tyler Moore and Bob Newhart shows, not even the No. 1 ranked Hoosiers. Anchorman Ted Knight (Baxter) wins out over coach Bobby Knight.

It was back to the set Sunday afternoon and for somebody who doesn't care that much for tennis on television, I was enthralled with the match between Rod Laver and Jimmy Connors.

I later switched back and forth from tennis to women's "Super Stars" on ABC because that type of competition also is fascinating. It's just another example of how sharp the ABC chiefs are in sports programming. This "Super Stars" idea really has caught on, and announcer Keith Jackson, so very smooth in his delivery, adds to the production.

Until last weekend Mary Jo Peppier, a Rockford, Ill. native, was merely an excellent volleyball player, which entitled her to all the publicity she wanted. She earned $31,100 for winning "Super Stars" and must have earned a few laughs when she said, "The money's not the big thing. The women really appreciated getting together and meeting the top women in other fields."

That sounds good, Mary Jo, but I do hope you find something to do with the money.

After Mr. Connors and Ms. Peppier triumphed, I took a quick look at CBS and the pro basketball meeting between the Milwaukee Bucks and Boston Celtics. I'm not that enamored with the pro game, but the Celtics always are a delight, the only team I'd pay money to watch.

I spent a few minutes with "The Howard Cosell Sports Magazine," with Howard talking to George Foreman (yawn), and then it was back to Wide World for such unusual events as wrist wrestling and cliff diving, more of that "thrill of victory, agony of defeat."

I moved quickly past NBC's coverage of professional hockey because I refuse to squint, move my chair closer to the set, cuss or wonder which way the puck went. The puck comes in at 3 inches in diameter and weighs 5 1/2 ounces. This sport simply is not suited for television.

ABC took me to Honolulu at 4 p.m. Sunday. Normally, I can do without every weekend golf tournament, waiting for the big four of the U.S. Open, Masters, British Open, and PGA. It's great if the two leaders are tied heading to the 18th green, but how many times does that happen?

The Hawaiian Open grabbed my interest because of one man — Arnold Palmer. There he was Sunday battling for the lead. Go, Arnie, go.

They can talk all they want about Johnny Miller and Jack Nicklaus, and they are tremendous golfers, but Arnold Palmer is... well, nobody can ever replace him. He first came to golf as a muscular young man who could not keep his shirttail in, who smoked a lot, perisped a lot and who hit the ball with all the finesse of a dock worker lifting a crate of auto parts.

Arnie made birdsies by driving through forests, facing hooks around sharp corners, spearing wild slices over prodigious hills and then, all hunched up and pig-toed, starting puts into the cups.

It is precisely because of him the golf tour has tripled, quadrupled in money. He has become, they say, something more than life-size, something immeasurable in champs.

If this is true, it is not because of what he has won through the years but rather because of the pure, unadorned joy he brought to trying.

Watching Arnold Palmer battle Sunday for another title, a title he lost Monday to someone named Gary Groh, was the perfect way to end a long weekend of television.

Saxon bowlers going for 1st

by PAUL LOGAN

The state bowling tournament will have a new format this weekend, but the faces of the finalists remain pretty much the same.

Both Forest View, the defending champion, and Schaumburg, third-place finisher last year, will have veteran teams in action this morning in the first round at Town and Country Lanes in Peoria.

Half the field will open up at 8 a.m. with the remainder going at 11 a.m. Quarterfinal play will begin at 2 p.m. The semifinals are set for 9 a.m. Saturday with the finals going at 1 p.m.

This is the third trip to the three-year-old tourney for both teams. The Forest View Falcons placed ninth two years ago with the Schaumburg Saxons taking second. Only one of the top three places has eluded Saxon coach Sharon Niekamp.

"Oh year, we can," said Niekamp of her team's chances of overtaking front-running Forest View. "I think we'll do it, really."

The Falcons present quite a challenge after crushing the opposition last Saturday in the Arlington District, knocking down 4811 pins. Only one other team had a better showing — Abingdon with 4911 pins in a downstate district.

Last year Nancy Lachus, then only a freshman, led the Falcons of Coach Diann Tomalino to the title over Hoopes-East Lynn (which also returns this year). Now a steady sophomore, Lachus paced her team in the district with a 175 average over six games.

Right behind her was a freshman! Judy Pleickhardt rolled a 161. Then came tourney veterans Dale Smart with 158, Patty Russo with 151 and Dawn Powell with 153.

Schaumburg will be going with an all-senior lineup. Carrying the top averages from the district are Denise Huzar with 173, Cheryl Goocher with 161, Jean Connell with 147 and Debra Bless with 134.

The other Saxon who bowled in the district was freshman Carri Chak (136). She'll be the top reserve in favor of Donna Mazzone. Mazzone suffered a slump, but is now pulling herself out of it. She'll be carrying a 137.

Niekamp said she believed her players were all capable of bowling much higher because "they like those lanes downstate."

"They've seemed to have forgotten about last Saturday," said Forest View's coach of the easy district win. "Their big goal was going downstate. They're very excited about it."

Sharon Niekamp.

By virtue of the district showings, some of the teams besides Abingdon (the 1973 winner) and Schaumburg are Rock

Conference wrestling meet wide open

by KEITH REINHARD
Wrestling Editor

Up for grabs.

That's about the most appropriate description for the fifth annual Mid-Suburban League wrestling tournament scheduled to get underway at Elk Grove tonight. The action will build to a frenzied and dramatic climax by Saturday night some time after 7:30.

There are 13 squads and well over 150 grapplers entered in the competition and any one of six teams and any 12 of perhaps 40 or more individuals are given an earnest shot at championship laurels.

The wide-open atmosphere is in sharp contrast to recent years when powerful Hersey contingents rolled expectantly to the title. Since the conference meet was added to the MSL mat schedule for the 1970-71 season the Huskies have never been removed from the overall champlionship picture.

They aren't out of it this year either, although they are given no better a chance at tourney laurels than Arlington, Buffalo Grove, Elk Grove, Rolling Meadows or Schaumburg.

Hersey's firm grip on the overall wrestling title was in fact first budged last year at this time when the Saxons came from obscurity to lay claim to the conference meet crown and the Grenadiers moved in to snare runnerup honors. That relegated coach Rick Mann's unbeaten dual meet squad to only a half share of the overall prize — along with Elk Grove.

Individually, the competition is even keener. All 13 schools have at least a contender or two. And with the exception of possibly two or three super performers with perfect or near perfect records in arm and downstate experience under their belts, no one has a sure path to success this weekend.

The meet begins with preliminaries at 6:00 tonight. The semifinals will be conducted at session two starting at noon Saturday and the championship session kicks off at 6 p.m. tomorrow. Here's a brief rundown of what each weight will have to offer:

88 Pounds — Bison Terry McCann (22-4), Card Steve Scott (18-3), Darcy Rice of Hoffman Estates (16-2) and Saxon Mark Zeller (18-4) are good bets to make it to the semis. After that anything goes.

105 Pounds — Defending 99-pound champ John Gross of Forest (21-1) figures to turn back Arlington's Dan Weber (16-4-1) in the finals. A couple of strong dark horses at this weight are Conant's Ed Armstrong (6-9-1) and Don Sorensen of Hersey (11-3-1).

112 Pounds — A tough weight Saxon Terry Ruddy (21-0-1) will have to work hard to retain his title for a third year. Runnerup contenders include Arlington's Gary Holub (9-3), Buffalo Grove's Jim Brough (20-3), Falcon Jamie King (11-3-1), Huskie Jim Watters (7-4), Palatine's Paul Bordenkircher (9-6-1), J'n Carlstrom of Meadows (16-8) and Wheeling's Mike Reif (14-8-3).

119 Pounds — Just as tough and a classic showdown figures to develop between Bison Rich Wilhelm (25-1) and Mustang Roy Carlstrom (24-1) although defending champ Joe Hanson of Schaumburg (17-5) has other ideas. Also strong in the running are View's Kevin Smith (17-4-1) and Fremd's Doug McCarthy (13-10).

126 Pounds — This has to be the most rugged division. Pick any one of eleven: Redbird John Preissing (17-4) Bison Greg Thomson (15-6-2), Conant's John Gallo (11-6-1), Falcon Guy Semar (11-9-2), Vike Diego Ramirez (15-4), Hersey's Dan Lococo (16-5), Hawk Dan Kaufman (13-6), Prospect's Jim Bethell (12-3-3), Mustang Roger Mattix (19-1), Saxon Ron Kuchnia (14-4-1) or 'Cat Phil Dietrich (12-10-1).

133 Pounds — Elk Grove's Rick Morris (18-0) is up from 126 to repeat. In the race for second are Card Ken Kennedy (10-5-2), Conant's Phil Kerr (12-6-2), Huskie Gary Hart (9-6) and Pirate Mike MacBride (13-7-2).

138 Pounds — Mark Furlong of Hersey (20-0) is the one to beat. His chief competition stands to be provided by Arlington's Lee Bube (9-6-2), Buffalo Grove's Doug Browning (16-5), Cougar Ron Burhite (16-4-2), Grenadier John Carpenter (12-2-2), Fremd's Ron Barry (9-7-3), Hawk Chad McCreary (11-4-2) and Pete Martin of Rolling Meadows (22-3-1).

145 Pounds — Extremely well balanced, Huskie Eric Strutz (13-3-1), will get top seed and Conant's Tim Goergen (16-4-1) and Bison Jerry Bickner (19-6) are top contenders.

155 Pounds — Gren Leo Montemayor (15-2) is a returning champ Kevin Temesy of Hersey (17-3-1) is likely to meet him in the finals although someone must stop Card Herb Darmofal (12-3) and Saxon Bill Bowers (13-4-3).

167 Pounds — Another strong field with no clearcut favorite. Cardinal Lee Weitz (16-4), Fremd's Jeff Sveinsson (19-5), Huskie Gary Hodge (11-6-1) and Schaumburg's Bob Jones (12-6-2) look good.

185 Pounds — Redbird Jim Stanczak (20-1) and Saxon Mori Bello (16-2) are on a collision course. Wildcat Ed Wargo (20-4) is a formidable barrier along with Mustang Rich Whitfield (18-8). Heavyweight — Ken Jaffke of Schaumburg (14-3) and Wheeling's Ken Kent (16-5) are a possible finals hookup. Also in the race are Card Kirk Kennedy (10-6-1), Vike Jeff Ossler (15-5) and Bob Newell of Meadows (19-7).

Officials huddle on Bears' stadium for Arlington

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track, it was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $35 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clabour of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clabour said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clabour said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings, but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was 1½ or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clabour said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 5,000-unit housing development on race-track property.

Clabour said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 60-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

9 taken into custody in Elk Grove Village raid

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center, The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill, it was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL. A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

Fremd girls top Hoffman cagers

(Editor's note: Each week during the girls' basketball season, the Herald will feature one game. In this way, every team will be given a special story.)

by PAUL LOGAN

A crowd of over 200 people — large by girls' basketball standards — rooted for hosting Hoffman Estates and Fremd Wednesday night.

The Hoffman fans were hoping for an upset of the highly touted Viking quintet of Coach Carol Plodzien. Although the Hawks lost the "war" — 65-44, they won the "battle" by holding the Vikings to below their season average.

Fremd came into the game with 40-point victories over its first two opponents and carrying a 74.5 offensive average as well as a 34.5 defensive average. Hoffman, coached by Patti Kennedy, spoiled both those totals before losing its first game in two starts.

In other non-league action, Arlington slipped Conant, 42-40.

Fremd — unbeaten over the past three seasons — used its deadly zone press to break open a close first quarter. And when the winners recovered Hoffman turnovers, Vicki Limberg was usually scoring. She poured in six baskets in the first period and finished with 20 points to lead Fremd.

Hoffman, led by Clare Dowling, made one big move at Fremd in the second quarter. Trailing 20-10, the Hawks cut the lead to 24-17 on Dowling's 15-foot shot. Then the Vikings outscored them 12-2 the rest of the quarter to take a commanding intermission margin of 36-19.

Also scoring for Fremd — the defending Mid-Suburban Conference champ — were Colleen Cannon (14), Donelda Danz (8), Margaret Hamill (7) with Heide Gelsler, Connie Bruns, Kathy Ulrich and Sheryl Hansen having four each.

Danz pulled down 18 rebounds with Cannon and Hamill the next closest with 9 and 7, respectively.

Fremd's zone frustrated Dowling over the first three quarters before giving way to the substitutes. Dowling scored 12 in the final period to finish with 23. She was also credited with 21 of her team's 32 rebounds.

Also scoring for Hoffman were Sandra Norton (10) and Julie Ruh (5) with Tracey Farrish, Lisa Jaworski and Mary Hill having two each. Hill, a hustling reserve guard who stands just 4-foot-7, proved to be a real crowd pleaser, especially when she stole the ball for her only layup.

"I thought we had an off-night," said Fremd's coach. Maybe for Fremd, but most area coaches would love to have "off-night" performances that leave them winning by 21 points.

SCORE BY QUARTERS

Fremd 20 18 15 14—65
Hoffman Estates 10 9 8 17—44

In the game held at Conant, Arlington came back from a 22-13 halftime deficit to win by two.

Kathy Evans led Conant with 12 points.

SCORE BY QUARTERS

Arlington 10 3 15 14—42
Conant 6 18 10 8—40

Fremd won the 'B' game, 31-18. Arlington also won its preliminary game, 34-23.

Hoffman sets signup dates

The Hoffman Estates Athletic Association has announced the start of the 1975 girls and boys soccer program. Registration dates are Saturdays — Feb. 8, March 1 and 22 at Vogel's Barn from 9 p.m. to 4 p.m. Registration will be limited to 500 children on a first-come-first-served basis. Each team will consist of 15 or 18 players.

The soccer registration fee is $10 per child with a maximum limit of $30 per family. Each player will receive a complete soccer uniform including nylon jersey, pants and stockings for the $10 registration fee. The uniform is theirs to keep.

Games will be played on the fields at Union Oil, Golf and Meacham Rds. on Sunday afternoons beginning at noon.

The soccer program is again recruiting any interested male and female coaches and referees, due to the expansion of the program. No experience is necessary as soccer clinics will be held by Bill McAlister for coaches and by Mike Beers for refs. Both men are well-qualified in their fields.

Anyone interested in any capacity should contact Jim Napier, the soccer commissioner, at 885-3245.

Bowling state meet

Island (4722), Blue Island Eisenhower (4674) and Dixon (4573).

The latter team is causing some controversy because four of the five bowlers are boys. It's the only one so manned in the 32-team field.

The Dixon school board ruled against sponsoring a boys' team, so the quartet joined the girls' squad. Although the team isn't leading the district qualifiers, there's some fear that the boys took it easy in the second round of the district. All their scores fell off with only the one girl's three-game average being higher.

Today's bowling will see the top 16 scoring teams advancing to the quarterfinals. The eight highest scoring teams after that second round will advance to the semifinals. Total pin count for all rounds will determine the places of the four finalists.

Lincoln sets communication talk Thursday

Clete Hinton

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15

The Lincoln School PTA will offer its third presentation Thursday in a year-long series on "Improving Communication Between Parents and Children."

Clete Hinton, counselor at Harper College, will talk in "Communicating Meaningful Values" at 7:30 p.m. in the commons of the school, 1021 Ridgewood Ln., Palatine. Hinton suggests that if parents can clarify their values and "know what they want to communicate" to children, the family can become more purposeful, enthusiastic, positive, and aware of what is worth striving for.

Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21

There will be a ski trip Wednesday to Wilmet Mountain Wis., for students and teachers at London Junior High School.

Students will leave London at 1:30 p.m. and return at 11 p.m. Cost of the trip is $13, which includes the tow ticket, equipment rental, 1½-hour lesson and transportation. The cost of the two ticket and bus is $8 for those who do not need equipment or the lesson. Reservations must be made in advance with Kathy Weber.

Hamburger day will be Tuesday for students and staff at Field School, 51 St. Armand Ln., Wheeling. Lunch costs 60 cents.

$200 million MSD suit faced by Des Plaines

by ANNE SLAVICEK and STEVE BROWN

Metropolitan Sanitary District trustees Thursday threatened to file a $200 million lawsuit against the City of Des Plaines if continued city protests delay funding approval for a sewage plant on the city's west side.

Allen S. Lavin, attorney for the district, was unanimously directed to file the damage suit if the city's current lawsuit against the sanitary district delays a decision by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency past the June 30 deadline for 1974-75 federal grants.

The threatened suit came a day after the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission decided to endorse the projected size of the plant despite a commission staff recommendation that the size of the plant be reduced.

LAVIN SAID THE $200 million damages asked in the suit would include the amount of grants the district stands to lose. A MSD spokesman said the district's concern about meeting the June 30 deadline for federal funds allocated for fiscal 1974-75 is based on a fear that while grant money is available now, it might not be next year.

"In the event we can't meet the deadline, the entire O'Hare basin project would have to be resubmitted and reconsidered for possible federal funding in subsequent fiscal years, subject to availability of federal funds," Lavin said.

The sanitary district is hoping federal funds will pay for about three-quarters of the $95 million plant.

The MSD suit also would seek compensatory damages for the increased cost of plant construction for each year construction is delayed, and punitive damages for "injury to public health" caused by the delay.

The city is attempting to control the design of the plant at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street through a local health ordinance.

WHILE MSD OFFICIALS were threatening Des Plaines, NIPC members were recommending federal approval of funding for the sewage plant even though information calling for a major reduction in the size of the plant had been given to the commissioners.

The Herald has learned that the commission decided to ignore a staff recommendation to allow construction of a plant that would treat no more than 60 million gallons of sewage per day. The MSD has designed the plant to handle about 72 million gallons of sewage at first and eventually treat 96 million gallons daily.

The reason for the difference in capacity sizes rests with projected population and industrial acreage development forecasts for the area that will be served by the plant. The projections made by NIPC show a smaller population in the area by the year 2030 and therefore a need for a smaller plant.

District officials agreed to accept an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency decision to use NIPC's population forecasts in several state and federal reports which are being prepared, but NIPC officials have not recommended a corresponding reduction in the size of the plant because of the change in population forecasts.

THE COMMISSION staff had forecast a population of about 350,000 persons living in the area by 2030, but the MSD reported a projected population of about 439,000 persons by the year 2000 with little growth after that.

Commission officials must approve the plans for the plant as a step toward obtaining federal funding.

Officially, the NIPC recommendation also decided to avoid any comment on questions regarding the environmental impact. The recommendation will be included in the environmental-impact statement being prepared by the district for review by the Illinois and U.S. environmental protection agencies.

The plant will receive sewage from seven Northwest suburbs through a deep tunnel system in Mount Prospect. The suburbs include Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

Resident alerts police to burglary of drugstore

An alert resident of Whispering Glen apartments enabled Rolling Meadows police to catch a pair of burglars as they broke into a drugstore Wednesday, police said.

A woman, whom police declined to name, phoned police when she saw a man on the roof of Family Drugs, 4007 Algonquin Rd. Police surrounded the store and caught two men just as one was about to enter through a roof ventilation system, police said.

Carroll Ray Holmes, 24, of 28 N. Crest, and Alan E. Prouty, 24, of 949 Kenilworth, both of Lake Zurich, were charged with burglary, possession of burglar's tools and possession of marijuana. They also were charged with a second count of burglary stemming from the Dec. 17, 1974, break-in at Rolling Meadows Drugs, 3010 Kirchoff Rd.

Rolling Meadows police were assisted by police from Schaumburg and the County. While the store was surrounded, Rolling Meadows Sgt. Timothy Lanergan and Patrolman Richard Hammer climbed onto the roof of Family Drugs, where they allegedly found Holmes standing over the heating vent. The cover had been removed, opening a passage into the store. Prouty was caught in the parking lot, where he allegedly was posted as a lookout.

Case said the method of entry was the same as the one used in the Rolling Meadows Drugs burglary, in which drugs valued at $1,000 and $300 in cash were taken.

Holmes and Prouty were unable to post bond set at $25,000 each, and were being held Wednesday. They are scheduled to appear Feb. 21 in Circuit Court in Arlington Heights.

Officials seek to have store site landscaped

JC Penney Co. Inc., is being asked by the City of Rolling Meadows why it has not landscaped the site of The Treasury Store more than a year after the store opened.

The plan commission this week directed John Hennessy, acting building and zoning officer, to demand an explanation from Penney officials.

When original plans for the store were presented to the commission they indicated specific large trees already on the site at Golf and Algonquin roads would be protected during construction and would remain, said Carl Couve, commission chairman. But the trees were removed, and representatives for The Treasury said they would replace them when they landscaped the entire site, said Couve.

With the exception of a few small shrubs, the site has not been landscaped, and the trees have not been replaced, said Couve.

"It is now over a year since the building was done," Couve said. "There is no landscaping and no trees, and we felt it should be followed through."

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Project wouldn't be profitable

Weekly recycling program postponed

A plan for a weekly recycling program in Rolling Meadows has been postponed indefinitely because recycling firms are not paying enough to make the program profitable.

Although an April 5 target date for weekly recycling was set last month, Evelyn Drummond, chairman of the recycling, ecology and beautification committee, said the plans must be dropped temporarily because prices paid for recycled items have declined.

"The price paid for tin cans has dropped 40 per cent," Mrs. Drummond said. Cans are purchased by Vulcan Materials Co., Gary, Ind. Newspaper brings only $8 per ton, a 10 per cent drop from January prices, she said. Newspaper is purchased by Pioneer Paper Stock Co., Chicago. A year ago, the firm was paying $40 a ton for newsprint, Mrs. Drummond said.

Recycling must generate enough money to pay the assisting youth group $75 and to justify the time public works employees spend collecting and delivering the recycled items. With prices the way they are, it "wouldn't be worthwhile to initiate weekly recycling now," Mrs. Drummond said.

RECYCLING WILL CONTINUE on the first and third Saturdays of the month as usual, Mrs. Drummond said. If the economy picks up, she said the committee will try to begin weekly recycling.

While recycling programs in nearby communities have been unsuccessful, the Rolling Meadows program has been profitable, officials said.

The city's recycling effort began as a monthly venture in 1971 and was expanded to twice monthly at the city's public works garage, 3200 Central Rd. The city's public works crews hauled away the material.

Several incentives have been offered to persons regularly bringing recyclable material to the city garage.

3 arrested in car-dealership theft

Two men and a juvenile were arrested by police Wednesday after they allegedly took tires and wrenches from Arlington Park Dodge, 1400 E. Northwest Hwy., Palatine.

Louis M. White, 21, of Fox River Grove, and Arthur J. Hultin, 17, of 396 S. Maple Rd., Palatine, were charged with burglary and theft. They are scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court Feb. 13.

A 15-year-old Palatine boy also was taken into custody by police in connection with the burglary and was released to his parents.

Police apprehended the three in the 600 block of Williams Drive shortly after they responded to the burglary reported by a resident.

Police recovered the stolen property at a house construction site on Williams Drive. The items were stolen from the parking lot of the company.

Police discount rumors in rape case

by STIRLING MORITA

Sheriff's Police assured about 300 concerned residents of Palatine Township Thursday night that an intensive investigation has been launched into the recent rape and beating of an English Valley subdivision woman at her home.

Maj. Richard Lowthorp, commander of the northern portion of the county, told the standing-room-only crowd that rumors recently circulating in the north part of the township were false and contributed to a hysteria in the area about inadequate police protection.

Lowthorp said he has 12 men working on the investigation of the Jan. 31 rape, beating and robbery of the woman in the garage of her home near Dundee and Smith roads.

AT THE MEETING at Lincoln School, residents of English Valley Pepper Tree Farms and Heatherlea subdivisions voiced concern about police patrol and responses by the Sheriff's Police.

Lowthorp said it did not take the county police 40 minutes to respond to the report of the incident, as some residents said, and said there are tape recordings that indicate it took less than 18 minutes from dispatch to the policeman's last radio notification for evidence technicians to arrive at the home.

He added that the neighbor who reported the incident called the telephone operator wishing to report a family fight. The woman was connected with the Palatine Police Dept. and the information was relayed to Sheriff's Police. There was never a report of a rape or beating, Lowthorp said.

Lt. Howard Vanik said the Jan. 31 rape appeared to be similar to one last October in the nearby Countryside development and to one reported last year in Mount Prospect. He said the similar circumstances were that the rapes were committed by a black man and that the victims apparently were followed home from shopping centers. Vanik maintained no similar incidents were reported recently in the three-subdivision area — as had been rumored in English Valley.

EUGENE DORSCH, president of the English Valley Homeowners' Assn., said after the meeting, "It (the rape) highlighted one of the problems we have living in unincorporated Cook County." A committee has been formed to look into possible annexation of the three-subdivisions into the Village of Palatine.

Police protection is one of the reasons for seeking annexation, Dorsch said. "I think people are concerned about police protection."

Vanik said authorities are looking for a black man who possibly works as a construction worker in the Palatine area.

Police said the suspect was described as being in his early 20s, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 150 to 160 pounds, slim build and having a mustache. The intruder was wearing a stocking cap, dark knit jacket and dark pants. He was believed to be driving a tan or gold over brown 1968-1970 Buick with damage to the rear right side.

Planners urge rezoning for industry firm

The Rolling Meadows Plan Commission has recommended rezoning land for an industrial plant on W. Frontage Road in the city's north industrial park.

The property is owned by George Tangas, who wants to build a plant for Colimatics Inc., a firm he owns that manufactures electronic components.

Tangas asked for a variation from parking requirements to allow him to put more than six parking spots in the front of the building.

The commissioners noted the parking variance would have allowed Tangas to build a larger structure than would be permitted if he complied with the parking code. "We felt he was putting too big a building on the lot," said Carl Couve, commission chairman.

Bennett T. Trapani, representing the owner, also requested a variance allowing him to include an undeveloped road right-of-way as part of his total acreage. He is negotiating for the city to vacate the right-of-way. If the city agrees, it would revert to his ownership. The city has no plans to build the road, which would be an extension of Winnetka Avenue at Frontage Road.

The commissioners declined to grant the right-of-way variance until Tangas' project is approved by the city.

Generally, said Couve, the commission "felt it was good land usage" to rezone the site industrial. He noted surrounding property already has industrial zoning and use.

Officials huddle on Bears' stadium for Arlington

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track. It was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $75 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clabour of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clabour said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clabour said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was in 12 or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clabour said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 7,000-unit

housing development on race track property.

Clabour said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 60-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center, The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill, it was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $57,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

New citizens' unit concerned about downtown project

What will happen to downtown Palatine?

While village officials and local businessmen mull the question of redevelopment, a group of homeowners near downtown is forming an association to make their concerns known.

The new homeowners' association —

Hearing rescheduled on perilous buildings

A hearing on the condition of two houses in violation of Palatine's dangerous building ordinance was rescheduled Thursday to Feb. 20.

Circuit Court Judge L. Sheldon Brown has asked for a final status report on the condition of the houses at 911 E. Glencoe Rd. and 1004 Fosket Dr. at the Feb. 20 hearing.

At the last hearing Frank Waters, owner of the houses, reported the houses were lowered onto their foundations and most repairs were completed.

The village started legal action against Waters last May to improve the condition of the houses or to have them razed. The houses were on blocks for nearly a year when the legal action started. The houses were moved from the vicinity of Palatine Road and Winston Drive to make way for the widening of Palatine Road.

Lions Club Ladies' Night set Feb. 21

The Palatine Lions Club will host a Women's night Feb. 21 at the Old Orchard Country Club in Mount Prospect, 700 W. Rand Rd. Admission is $10 per person.

The event will include a dinner and the play "Mary, Mary."

Reservations must be made by Feb. 14 and should be sent to 607 N. Clark Dr., Palatine. Further information is available by calling 358-3274.

ZBA postpones meeting

The Palatine Zoning Board of Appeals postponed its Thursday meeting and rescheduled it for 8 p.m. Feb. 20 at the Slade Street Fire Station, 117 W. Slade St.

The only item on the agenda was parking at the Village Oasis Shopping Center on Northwest Highway.

Pancake Day Sunday

The Lions Club of Palatine will host a Pancake Day breakfast Sunday at the St. Thomas of Villanova School, 1141 E. Anderson Dr., between 8 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

The breakfast of orange juice, coffee or milk, sausage and unlimited pancakes will cost $1.50 per person. Children under six will be served free.

Proceeds from the event will be used to support the Lions' community projects this year.

Wine-tasting party today

A wine-tasting party will be held today at 8 p.m. at St. Phillip's Episcopal Church, 342 E. Wood St., Palatine. The cost of the party will be $3 a couple.

Free-throw contest Saturday

The Palatine Park District will hold a free-throw shooting contest Saturday from noon to 2 p.m. at Birchwood Park, 435 W. Illinois Ave.

The event will be open to youngsters in grades four through 12. All participants must be registered by 4:30 p.m. on Friday at Birchwood Park. There is no charge.

Marathon dance contest

The Palatine Park District will host its first marathon dance contest for high school teens at 7:30 p.m. today at Birchwood Park, 435 W. Illinois Ave.

The cost will be $1 per person. Teens will be required to present their high school identification cards at the door. Awards will be presented to first and second place winners of the contest.

Lujack heads Little City drive

WCFL radio disc jockey Larry Lujack has been appointed chairman of this year's "Chicagoand Smiles for Little City" program.

The program, which will coincide with National Clown Week Aug. 8 and 9, will be an areawide effort to raise funds for the Little City Community. Little City is a rehabilitation and training center in Palatine for mentally handicapped children.

William Joyce, fund-raising chairman for Little City, announced Lujack's appointment. Lujack is a Palatine resident.

the North Central Palatine Neighborhood Assn. — met for the first time this week and outlined its objectives.

The residents expressed concern Wednesday about the current condition of the downtown area with its boarded-up houses, conversion of houses into low-rent apartments and land speculators buying property, said Thomas H. Bowman, cochairman of the group.

Questions were also raised by the residents on the affect of the proposed downtown redevelopment on the area. These included:

- Will high-rise buildings be permitted?

- What is being done to provide parking and eliminate traffic congestion?

- Won't the construction add to existing sewer problems?

- Who will pay the cost for increased police and fire protection?

Fear also was expressed that late-hour liquor licenses would be given in the area which could lead to an increase in the crime rate.

Bowman said village officials probably will be invited to future meetings to explain the downtown redevelopment program and hear the residents' concerns.

The residents also will channel their concerns and get information through the Neighborhood Council of the Palatine Advisory Board. Curtis Tico has been appointed to represent the homeowners on the council.

The residents also elected officers for six-month terms. The officers are: Jack Zenner, chairman; Tico and Bowman, cochairmen; Lorraine Kearns, secretary; and Harold Berg, treasurer.

THE AREA THE association represents is bounded by the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks on the south, Smith Street on the west, Northwest Highway on the north and Hicks Road on the east. The area will be divided into six sections with approximately 100 houses in each. Area captains will be selected to represent the different sections.

Other areas the residents indicated they would like to become involved in are the plans for Palatine High School and the old village dump on Smith Street, street improvement plans for the area and plans to separate the combined sewer system.

The next meeting of the neighborhood association will be at 8 p.m. March 5 at the Community Park Fieldhouse.

Police discount rumors in rape case

by STIRLING MORITA

Sheriff's Police assured about 300 concerned residents of Palatine Township Thursday night that an intensive investigation has been launched into the recent rape and beating of an English Valley subdivision woman at her home.

Maj. Richard Lowthorp, commander of the northern portion of the county, told the standing-room-only crowd that rumors recently circulating in the north part of the township were false and contributed to a hysteria in the area about inadequate police protection.

Lowthorp said he has 12 men working on the investigation of the Jan. 31 rape, beating and robbery of the woman in the garage of her home near Dundee and Smith roads.

AT THE MEETING at Lincoln School, residents of English Valley Pepper Tree Farms and Heatherlea subdivisions voiced concern about police patrol and responses by the Sheriff's Police.

Lowthorp said it did not take the county police 40 minutes to respond to the report of the incident, as some residents said, and said there are tape recordings that indicate it took less than 18 minutes from dispatch to the policeman's last radio notification for evidence technicians to arrive at the home.

He added that the neighbor who reported the incident called the telephone operator wishing to report a family fight. The woman was connected with the Palatine Police Dept. and the information was relayed to Sheriff's Police. There was never a report of a rape or beating, Lowthorp said.

Lt. Howard Vanik said the Jan. 31 rape appeared to be similar to one last October in the nearby Countryside development and to one reported last year in Mount Prospect. He said the similar circumstances were that the rapes were committed by a black man and that the victims apparently were followed home from shopping centers. Vanik maintained no similar incidents were reported recently in the three-subdivision area — as had been rumored in English Valley.

EUGENE DORSCH, president of the English Valley Homeowners' Assn., said after the meeting, "It (the rape) highlighted one of the problems we have living in unincorporated Cook County." A committee has been formed to look into possible annexation of the three-subdivisions into the Village of Palatine.

Police protection is one of the reasons for seeking annexation, Dorsch said. "I think people are concerned about police protection."

Vanik said authorities are looking for a black man who possibly works as a construction worker in the Palatine area.

Police said the suspect was described as being in his early 20s, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 150 to 160 pounds, slim build and having a mustache. The intruder was wearing a stocking cap, dark knit jacket and dark pants. He was believed to be driving a tan or gold over brown 1968-1970 Buick with damage to the rear right side.

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Death in crash ruled accident by coroner

The death of a Palatine Township woman who suffered fatal injuries Jan. 29 when a Schaumburg squad car crashed head-on with her auto was ruled accidental by a County Coroner's jury Thursday.

The inquest into the death of Christine Lovan, 21, of 1079 N. Deer Ave., was held at the Oehler Funeral Home in Des Plaines.

Sidney Berman, a deputy coroner, said, "I am quite sure that the operator of the vehicle (Patrolman David Mabbitt) did not use the proper care and caution in operating his vehicle. However, I do not believe that not exercising that care and caution is tantamount to criminal negligence."

"But being a police officer, he sets an example and at all times should exercise that care and caution," he added.

Mabbitt, the squad-car driver, did not testify at the inquest. The accident occurred on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street, Schaumburg. The squad car was passing a slower moving vehicle on Roselle Road and swinging back into its lane of traffic when it sideswiped a car and crashed into the Lovan vehicle, police said.

Mabbitt has been placed on suspension pending a fire and police commission hearing Feb. 22 on a departmental charge concerning care of equipment. He also is scheduled to appear March 12 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court on a charge of improper passing.

Car stalls on C&NW tracks: woman unhurt

A Schaumburg woman escaped injury Wednesday night when her car stalled and was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. train at the Colfax Street and Quentin Road crossing in Palatine.

Janice A. Boatman, 19, of 1410 N. Valley Lake Dr., was northbound on Quentin Road when the eastbound train struck the passenger side of her car.

In a separate accident, two cars collided on Palatine Road, east of Elmwood Avenue.

Lee J. Flodin, 20, of 828 Old Willow Rd., Wheeling, was eastbound on Palatine Road when his car collided with a car driven by Steve Eastman, 30 of 627 E. Palatine Rd., police said.

Flodin was treated for a head injury and released from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

Flodin was ticketed by Palatine police for failure to reduce speed to prevent an accident, and Eastman was ticketed for improper backing out of his driveway. Both men are scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights Branch of Circuit Court March 6.

Officials huddle on Bears' stadium for Arlington

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track. It was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $35 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clabour of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clabour said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clabour said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings, but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was 1½ or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clabour said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 5,000-unit housing development on race-track property.

Clabour said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 80-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company — which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center. The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill. It was learned. A source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

Busse celebrates 80th birthday

Fred W. Busse, lifelong resident of the area, celebrated his 80th birthday a week ago at a surprise dinner party given in his honor. Son Harold and his wife Carol hosted the affair at their home at 312 E. Evergreen Ave. More than 40 relatives and friends attended.

Busse has been an active florist since his youth and still continues to help supervise the greenhouses at Busse Flowers and Gifts Inc., Mount Prospect. He is currently a director of the Mount Prospect State Bank and he is also actively involved at St. Paul Lutheran Church. He has been active in many community affairs over the years.

Fred and his wife Alma have been married for 57 years and have four children. Three live in this area: Herbert, who lives in Woodstock, Sylva, who lives at home; and Harold, who lives in Mount Prospect. Son Arnold and his wife Alice live in from Coronado, Calif., for the occasion.

Busse is the grandfather of nine and the great-grandfather of six.

SIGN OF THE TIMES? Two "couples club" groups from St. Mark Lutheran Church certainly had totally different programs at their meetings last month!

The "Roaring Twenties" group, made up of young married couples in their 20s, had a wine tasting and cheese party. Couples Club, made up primarily of men and women with grown children, had a program on "Alcoholism."

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Bicentennial Commission, which convenes on the first Saturday of each month, has moved its meeting time to 10 a.m. The group previously met at 11 a.m., for one hour only. Now, as the committee gets into specifics with definite plans and commitments to be made for the big celebration, more time is needed. The meetings will last until noon or so.

All interested citizens are, of course, welcome to attend the commission sessions. They are held at Village Hall — usually in Village Mgr. Robert Epley's office.

THE REV. Chetti Devasahayam, from Serampore College in Calcutta, India, will speak at the morning worship service at South Church-Community Baptist Sunday, 11 a.m.

DO ATTEND St. Raymond's big Jubilee '75 that opens tonight with performances Saturday evening and also next Friday and Saturday.

More than 1,000 St. Raymond parishioners and others in the community are working on the production called "An American Almanac." There are seven shows, restaurants, casinos.

Tickets are $5 each — with senior citizens admitted for the first performance tonight for $3.

Church, Linneman traffic problems to be corrected

Mount Prospect officials said Thursday the village will take interim measures to ease traffic problems at the intersection of Church and Linneman roads.

The move includes installation of a three-way stop sign system and removal of a do-not-enter sign that prohibited northbound traffic from entering Church Road.

At a meeting with area residents

Thursday, village police and fire committee members said the plan would go into effect within a few days.

THE MEASURE is a response to residents' complaints that heavy amounts of traffic were using side streets at high speeds to avoid the do-not-enter sign at Church and Linneman.

The nearby United Airlines headquarters on Algonquin Road generates most of the traffic that uses the two roads to get to Golf Road.

The interim plan will allow motorists to enter Church Road.

Within the next few months the village plans to improve the intersection by installing a traffic island and eliminating a 10-foot-wide curb on Linneman.

Trustee George B. Anderson said the improvements will avoid hazards and make for safer traffic flow. The island will allow a continuous right turn for Linneman Road traffic, he said.

The improvements will be financed with state motor fuel tax funds.

THIRTY RESIDENTS who attended the session expressed over-all approval of the plan. Several said they were relieved the do-not-enter sign is to be removed because they were being forced to use alternate routes to and from their homes.

One resident, Bruce Bledar, 1026 Church Rd., suggested additional stop signs be placed at Ash and Willow drives on Church Road to keep motorists from driving at high speeds.

Trustee Kenneth V. Scholten said, however, the presence of too many stop signs would lead motorists to disregard them.

Anderson said the matter will not require village board action.

Charge dropped in traffic case

A traffic charge against an Arlington Heights man for an Oct. 7 accident was dropped Wednesday in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court when the other driver failed to appear in court.

The charge of failure to yield the right-of-way while making a left turn against William R. Richards, 49, of 225 S. Forrest, was discharged. A tentative fine of $35 was levied against Laszlo Somogyi, 34, of Chicago, who did not appear in court.

Somogyi, who broke both arms and both legs in the evening rush hour accident at Northwest Highway and Waterman Avenue, was charged with improper lane usage and driving a motorcycle without the proper driver's license classification.

In other court action, Vincent J. Badalamenti, 21, of 504 Brockton Ln., Schaumburg, was granted a new judge and had his possession of marijuana case continued to April 9.

Underwood 'interested' in schools job

Kenneth Underwood, former superintendent of the West Virginia school system that erupted in a book-banning controversy, said Thursday he "would always be interested in a job in the Northwest suburbs."

Underwood, reached at his West Virginia home, said he did not know if he would accept the position of superintendent of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 if it were offered.

Underwood, 46, was superintendent of Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 from 1964-66. His name was submitted by Dist. 50 board member Judy Zanca to the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to be investigated as a possible candidate for the Dist. 59 superintendent's post.

"I don't have any idea what I'm going to do," Underwood said. "Right now, after what's happened, I'm just sitting back and enjoying life."

"My wife and I will be doing a lot of thinking over the next month and hope to make a decision on what we're going to be doing about March 1."

UNDERWOOD gained national prominence last fall when he became involved in a book-banning protest by parents in the Kanawha County, W. Va., school system, where he was superintendent. He resigned Jan. 31.

Cleaners clerk robbed 2nd time in 8 days

A man robbed a clerk at Holiday Cleaners, 412 W. Northwest Hwy., for the second time in eight days early Thursday, Mount Prospect police said.

Police said the robber did not display a gun although he motioned with his hand in his pocket as if he had one. He made off with $50.25 Thursday. On Jan. 30, the same robber stole $41 from the same clerk.

Police said the robber was a white male, aged 17 to 19. The first robbery occurred at 1:34 p.m.; the second, at 8:17 a.m. The robber was armed with an automatic pistol during the first robbery, police said.

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

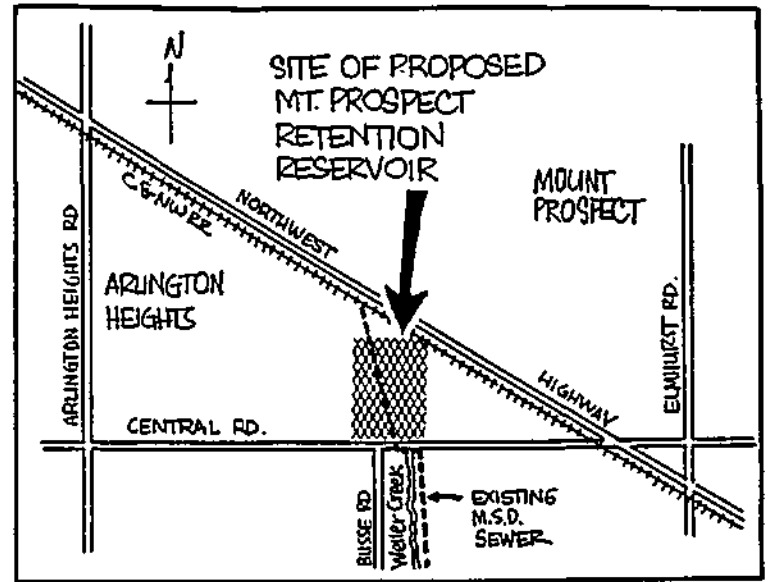

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood unit Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Site problems cited

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Construction of a reservoir to deter flooding in Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights has been delayed again, this time because of difficulties in obtaining the site.

Forrest C. Nell, chief engineer for the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD), said Thursday the district has not been able to buy the land it needs to build the stormwater reservoir at Central and Busse roads.

Neil delayed MSD board of trustees approval of a reservoir agreement with the two villages Thursday because he said he wanted to report to the board about problems in the acquisition of the land for the basin.

Although the district already has bought 26.7 acres, another 42.3 acres must be purchased before the basin can be built.

LAST YEAR MSD engineers blamed the two villages for delaying negotiations on the basin project. The two villages and the MSD have been trying to reach an agreement since August 1973.

Both villages approved the agreement in December.

While there is little doubt that the MSD will eventually get the land because the district can resort to condemnation, the problems in negotiating for the land purchase could delay the basin construction even more.

The basin, which would hold only storm sewage, not combined sanitary and storm sewage, would be built by the MSD. The two local villages in the agreement would cover any costs over $1.3 million for the construction and would be required to maintain the basin and to improve local sewers leading to the basin to keep sanitary sewage out of it.

Once the O'Hare Water Reclamation plant construction is finished and the system of underground tunnels is completed to collect combined sewage, the MSD plans to enlarge the Central and Busse basin and make it a holding basin for combined sewage. But that may be 10 years off, and officials of the two villages said in 1973 they wanted to see a part of the basin built sooner to help combat flooding.

WHILE HOLDING off on the basin approval, MSD officials Thursday said they have begun to acquire easements for the paths of the tunnels which will run under Mount Prospect to carry the sewage to the O'Hare plant.

The MSD paid $300 to Richard and Carlotta Kozak for an easement under their property at the southeast corner of William and Isabella streets in Mount Prospect and $200 to a trust held by the First Arlington National Bank for an easement under the northeast corner of Oakton Street and Higgins Road in Elk Grove Township.

The money went to 1880 Snacktime Inc., a restaurant at the corner which burned down a year ago. Beneficiary of the trust is John Kouzoukos, MSD officials said.

The MSD received a third permit to build the tunnel system free from the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

The permit allows the district to build tunnels along the west side of Elmhurst Road from the Northwest Tollway to Manawa Trail and across Central Road at Weller Lane.

Des Plaines faces $200 million suit

by ANNE SLAVICEK and STEVE BROWN

Metropolitan Sanitary District trustees Thursday threatened to file a $200 million lawsuit against the City of Des Plaines if continued city protests delay funding approval for a sewage plant on the city's west side.

Allen S. Lavin, attorney for the district, was unanimously directed to file the damage suit if the city's current lawsuit against the sanitary district delays a decision by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency past the June 30 deadline for 1974-75 federal grants.

The threatened suit came a day after the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission decided to endorse the projected size of the plant despite a commission staff recommendation that the size of the plant be reduced.

LAVIN SAID THE $200 million damages asked in the suit would include the amount of grants the district stands to lose. A MSD spokesman said the district's concern about meeting the June 30 deadline for federal funds allocated for fiscal 1974-75 is based on a fear that while grant money is available now, it might not be next year.

"In the event we can't meet the deadline, the entire O'Hare basin project would have to be resubmitted and reconsidered for possible federal funding in subsequent fiscal years, subject to availability of federal funds," Lavin said.

The sanitary district is hoping federal funds will pay for about three-quarters of the $95 million plant.

The MSD suit also would seek compensatory damages for the increased cost of plant construction for each year construction is delayed, and punitive damages for "injury to public health" caused by the delay.

The city is attempting to control the design of the plant at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street through a local health ordinance.

WHILE MSD OFFICIALS were threatening Des Plaines, NIPC members were recommending federal approval of funding for the sewage plant even though information calling for a major reduction in the size of the plant had been given to the commissioners.

The Herald has learned that the commission decided to ignore a staff recommendation to allow construction of a plant that would treat no more than 60 million gallons of sewage per day. The MSD has designed the plant to handle about 72 million gallons of sewage at first and eventually treat 96 million gallons daily.

The reason for the difference in capacity sizes rests with projected population and industrial acreage development forecasts for the area that will be served by the plant. The projections made by NIPC show a smaller population in the area by the year 2030 and therefore a need for a smaller plant.

District officials agreed to accept an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency decision to use NIPC's population forecasts in several state and federal reports which are being prepared, but NIPC officials have not recommended a corresponding reduction in the size of the plant because of the change in population forecasts.

THE COMMISSION staff had forecast a population of about 350,000 persons living in the area by 2030, but the MSD reported a projected population of about 439,000 persons by the year 2000 with little growth after that.

Commission officials must approve the plans for the plant as a step toward obtaining federal funding.

Officially, the NIPC recommendation also decided to avoid any comment on questions regarding the environmental impact. The recommendation will be included in the environmental-impact statement being prepared by the district for review by the Illinois and U.S. environmental protection agencies.

Officials huddle on Bears' stadium for Arlington

by KURT BAER

A top-level meeting among the owner of the Chicago Bears, the president of Madison Square Garden Corp. and officials of Arlington Heights was held Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a new Bears stadium at Arlington Park Race Track, it was learned Thursday.

The talk at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel reportedly centered on the village's ability to issue revenue bonds to pay for the stadium, estimated at around $75 million.

Village Pres. Ralph H. Clabour of Arlington Heights, who attended the meeting, said Thursday Bears' team owner

George Halas and Alan Cohen, Madison Square Garden president, indicated there would be future meetings soon to refine the cost figures.

"They've got to go back and get much better figures than what they had," Clabour said. "I guess they're doing the research on it now."

The Bears management reportedly is interested in a stadium similar to one built recently near Buffalo, N. Y. A dome-topped stadium is not thought to be under consideration.

Rich Stadium, in the Buffalo suburb of Orchard Park, has a seating capacity of 80,000.

Neither Halas nor Cohen were available for comment Thursday. However, sources indicated that accountants are attempting to reconcile the cost of building a new stadium with ticket receipts and other income to see if it is practical to build at Arlington Park.

If the Arlington Heights Village Board approved a revenue-bond sale for a stadium, the cost of the bonds would be paid for exclusively from stadium revenue. But by selling municipal revenue bonds that are tax-free to the holder, the village could save the stadium backers several percentage points in interest.

Clabour said he left the hour-long meeting Wednesday with the impression that Halas was in a hurry to schedule future meetings, but no date was set.

"I'm in the same position I was 11 or 2 months ago when they first decided to consider a stadium," Clabour said. "Until they get reasonably representative figures I'm not interested in spending a lot of my time and other people's time without knowing what's in it for the Village of Arlington Heights."

LAST MONTH, Cohen told The Herald the feasibility of a football stadium at Arlington Park was under study and that for the time being Madison Square Garden would suspend plans for a 7,000-unit housing development on race track property.

Clabour said he had no reason to doubt that Halas is sincerely interested in an Arlington Park stadium. But the village president said he told the 80-year-old Halas that he did not want Arlington Heights used as a "political go-between" in the team's dealings with the City of Chicago.

The Bears have signed a lease with the Chicago Park District to play their 1975 season in Soldier Field. But Halas has said he is not happy with the contract terms and would like to build a new stadium, either in Chicago or the suburbs.

FBI seizes bootlegged tapes in warehouse

by STEVE FORSYTH

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents raided an Elk Grove Village warehouse Thursday and broke up what they believe was a large bootleg recording operation that sold counterfeit tape recordings of famous artists at half price.

BENJAMIN NEIHART watches FBI agents go through stacks of stereo tapes believed to have been illegally produced in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Neihart was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit, police said after raiding the warehouse.

Acting on a tip from Elk Grove Village police, FBI agents entered the warehouse at 2825 Old Higgins Rd. The agents took nine persons into custody and confiscated $20,000 worth of tape-copying equipment as well as tens of thousands of counterfeit tapes.

Found by the FBI were tapes of such country-Western and rock stars as Lynn Anderson, Miles Davis, Aretha Franklin, Neil Diamond, Mac Davis and the Four Tops.

AGENTS SAID they are looking for Lowell Greenwood of Kentucky, and Andrew Moore of Niles, Mich., believed to be operators of the company—which is known both as Kelly Plastics and A&G Distributors.

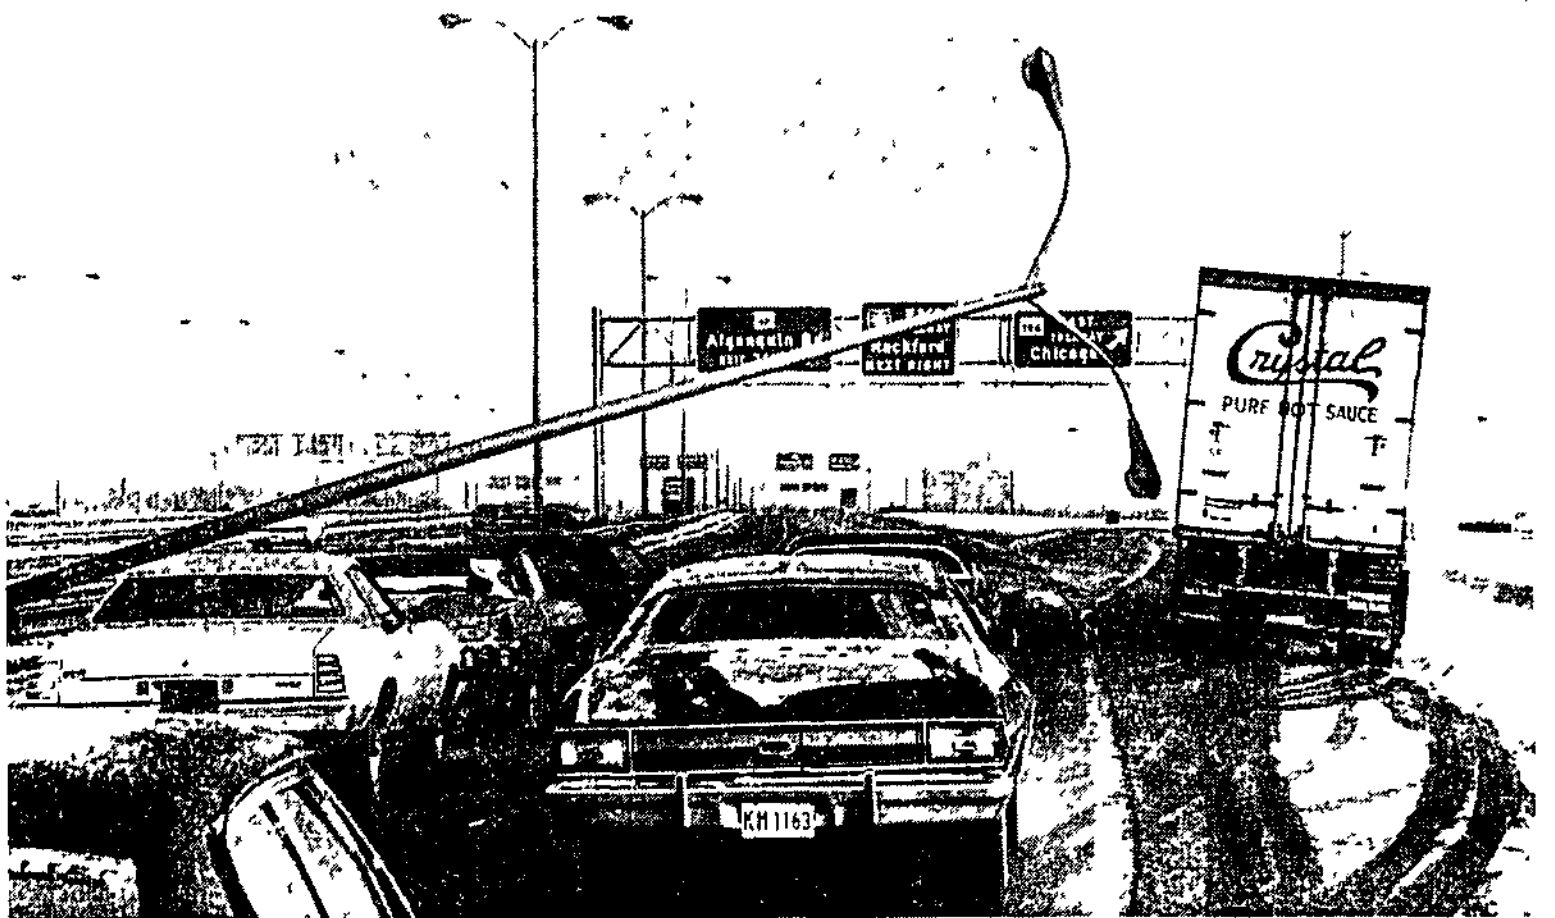

One of the nine taken into custody, Benjamin I. Neihart, 36, Florida, was charged with infringing on copyrighted music for profit. The others, said to be Polish immigrants, were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Ted Scudder said the company evidently bought legitimate tapes of recording artists and copied them. The warehouse contained a bank of automatic tape machines that could reproduce tapes from a master player.

The tapes were mostly eight-track recordings, many of them bearing no trademark, Scudder said. He could not estimate the income from the tape-making operation, but said the bootleg tapes usually sell for less than $4.50 compared to a regular market price of $8. "The profits have to be huge," he said.

The FBI was called in to make the arrests because the operation may violate

Ex-Schaumburg official probed in Woodfield building

Hugh Cahill acted as consultant to shopping center developer while village building commissioner

by PAT GERLACH

A former Schaumburg building commissioner is under federal investigation in connection with the construction of Woodfield Shopping Center, The Herald learned Thursday.

Hugh Cahill, who served as building commissioner from 1971 to January 1973, reviewed and approved plans for the world's largest shopping center at a time when he apparently was being paid consulting fees by Woodfield's developer, Taubman Co.

"Yes, I did some work on a consultant basis for Taubman Co. and they paid me," Cahill said Thursday.

The probe of Cahill is part of a continuing investigation of village government in Schaumburg by the U.S. Attorney's office. Village records back to 1969 were subpoenaed last July by a federal grand jury and several investigators have been assigned to the case.

An Internal Revenue Service agent visited the village municipal building within the last two weeks and made inquiries about Cahill. It was learned a source close to the investigation confirmed Thursday that Cahill's actions as building commissioner are being probed.

CAHILL, A CIVIL structural engineer, said his consulting work for the Southfield, Mich.-based shopping center firm consisted of "preliminary review" of plans later submitted by Taubman Co. to the village for official review.

"I don't think there was anything illegal about it. I gave them no concessions. Basically, they were pretty good plans," he said.

Philip Ross, Woodfield project manager, said Thursday he remembered Cahill as building commissioner but added he had no knowledge of Cahill doing consulting work for Taubman Co.

CAHILL IS REPORTED to have received a fee for each store in the shopping center for the advance review. He declined comment on specific fees paid to him by Taubman Co.

Cahill said the work was done at a time when the building department was a "one-man" operation. "There never was a time when I wasn't swamped with work," he said, saying the preliminary review of Woodfield plans made his work easier once plans were submitted to his office in the village.

Cahill resigned after he charged the building department was seriously understaffed. At that time, Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher disputed Cahill's charge, though the department has since been expanded.

During the time Cahill was building commissioner, Taubman Co. paid $53,500 in building permit fees for the first two phases of Woodfield, according to village records.

Neither Atcher nor Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel would comment on the investigation.

THE FEDERAL subpoena of village records called for all contracts, personnel records, names of village trustees and other officials as well as building permits, zoning records and minutes of all official meetings.

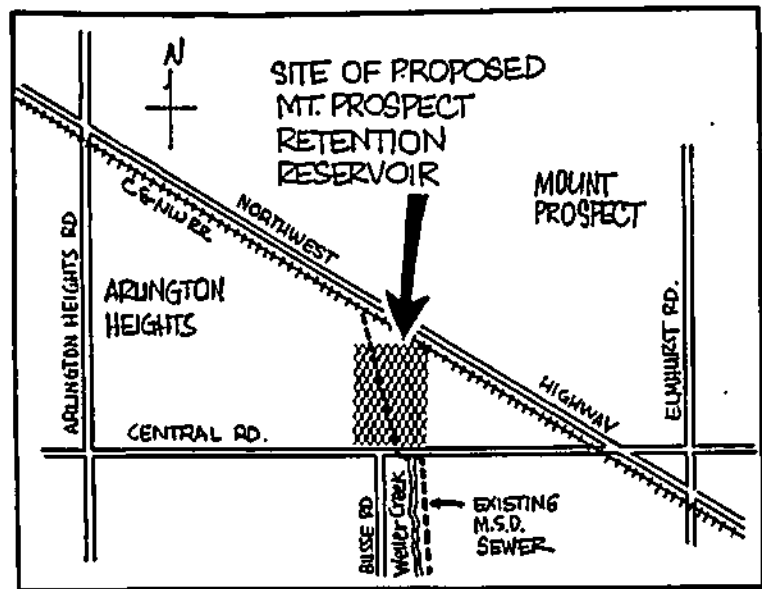

The statute of limitations on most federal violations is five years with the exception of a six-year limit on income-tax cases.

Financial records involving Atcher's personal transactions were subpoenaed from Schaumburg State Bank in late 1973.

Reportedly no grand jury testimony has been taken in the Schaumburg investigation.

Site problems cited

Reservoir project delayed again

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Construction of a reservoir to deter flooding in Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights has been delayed again, this time because of difficulties in obtaining the site.

Forrest C. Nell, chief engineer for the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD), said Thursday the district has not been able to buy the land it needs to build the stormwater reservoir at Central and Busse roads.

Nell delayed MSD board of trustees approval of a reservoir agreement with the two villages Thursday because he said he wanted to report to the board about problems in the acquisition of the land for the basin.

Although the district already has bought 26.7 acres, another 42.3 acres must be purchased before the basin can be built.

LAST YEAR MSD engineers blamed the two villages for delaying negotiations on the basin project. The two villages and the MSD have been trying to reach an agreement since August 1973.

Both villages approved the agreement in December.

While there is little doubt that the MSD will eventually get the land because the district can resort to condemnation, the problems in negotiating for the land purchase could delay the basin construction even more.

The basin, which would hold only storm sewage, not combined sanitary and storm sewage, would be built by the MSD. The two local villages in the agreement would cover any costs over $1.3 million for the construction and would be required to maintain the basin and to improve local sewers leading to the basin to keep sanitary sewage out of it.

Once the O'Hare Water Reclamation plant construction is finished and the system of underground tunnels is completed to collect combined sewage, the MSD plans to enlarge the Central and Busse basin and make it a holding basin for combined sewage. But that may be 10 years off, and officials of the two villages said in 1973 they wanted to see a part of the basin built sooner to help combat flooding.

WHILE HOLDING off on the basin approval, MSD officials Thursday said they have begun to acquire easements for the paths of the tunnels which will run under Mount Prospect to carry the sewage to the O'Hare plant.

'Resigned' Norman still in village prosecutor post

by JOE FRANZ

Donald Norman, Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who last summer submitted a letter of resignation as village prosecutor in Wheeling, is still on the job.

He said Thursday his resignation still stands, but that he has agreed to stay on until the village appoints a successor.

"I have not rescinded anything I said in writing or orally," he said. "But I told the village I would serve until I was replaced, and I meant that."

Village Mgr. George Passolt said he is considering applicants for the post and said Norman will be replaced when the interviews are completed.

"I've had a whale of a lot of applicants for this job," he said. "He (Norman) will continue to serve as village prosecutor until another person is appointed."

Passolt denied that Norman rescinded his resignation and would remain village prosecutor indefinitely. "I have not heard anything like that," he said. "I've got a resignation from him and that's all."

NORMAN, AN Arlington Heights attorney, has served as village prosecutor for more than eight years. In a letter to the village he said he was resigning because of other responsibilities.

"I'm not as busy now as I was when I submitted by resignation, but it still is effective," he said Thursday.

'Safety only reason for walks': Ryan

James T. Ryan, Independent Arlington Heights village president candidate, said Thursday he will propose sidewalk installation only in areas where they are needed for public safety.

Ryan made the statement at a morning news conference in which he pledged to stop any plans for sidewalks in several subdivisions, including Scarsdale, Stonegate and Sherwood.

He also said the board of local improvements — the appointed commission now planning sidewalk special assessment projects — should be eliminated.

"I have previously stated that an appointed board of local improvements should be eliminated since the citizens affected by a local assessment should, from the very outset, have the benefit of addressing his elected representative," Ryan said.

"SAFETY SHOULD BE the only reason for a sidewalk assessment and not uniformity," he added. The village should "bear the burden of proof" in showing that an area does need sidewalks for safety reasons, he said.

"By and large, areas such as Scarsdale, Stonegate, Pine Gate Highlands, Arlington Knolls, Sherwood, Arlingtondale and streets such as Hawthorne should be maintained essentially as they are," Ryan said. But he said that if it came to a choice between the charm of a neighborhood and proven safety considerations, "there would be no question that sidewalks should go in. I think parents would be 10 jumps ahead of us on that."

However, Ryan did say that residents who want sidewalks, such as those living on Ridge Avenue between Oakton Street and Thomas Avenue, should have them as soon as possible.

RYAN SAID THAT the village board or those members selected to serve as a board of local improvements would have to take the time to determine which areas require special assessment projects for safety reasons.

"I am not unaware of the great contributions that have been made by it and its members in the past," Ryan said of the board of local improvements. Ryan said he had voted in favor of some BOLI special assessment projects during his five years on the village board, "when I was convinced that there were safety considerations."

Ryan said that he would "change the ordinance" which establishes the board of local improvements, and gradually phase out its programs. Residents involved in pending programs should have the chance to voice their feelings on the projects, he said.

RYAN SAID HE expects to spend from $2,000 to $3,000 on his campaign for village president. He has hired a full-time campaign coordinator, David Wiltse, 102

S. Wilshire Ln., and will shortly open a campaign headquarters at 206 N. Dunton Ave.

Although three other independent village candidates have formed the Village Independent Party in opposition to the Caucus Party slate, Ryan said he was running as a "complete independent" and did not wish to run with any slate of candidates.

Ryan is running for village president against Caucus party-endorsed David Griffith. Both are village trustees.

The VIP slate for four trustee posts is Robert H. Miller, O. V. Anderson and August Bettman.

Caucus candidates are Madeline Schroeder, Alfred Barbora Jr., Norman Breyer and Mary Schlott.

VFW collecting items for servicemen

Arlington Heights VFW Post No. 981 is collecting clothing, books and records for servicemen hospitalized at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Persons with articles they wish to donate may drop them off at the VFW Clubhouse at 811 N. Yale Ave., or call Don Dewyzo at 392-6932 or Edward R. Doyle at 437-2864. Both will pick up donations.

Sticker deadline extended

The Village of Arlington Heights has extended the deadline for display of 1975 vehicle stickers to March 1 to coincide with the state deadline for new license plates.

The stickers are on sale at the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd. The cost is $15.

New budget may raise tax rate 9.5%

by KURT BAER

The Village of Arlington Heights' tax rate could increase 9.5 per cent to its highest level in at least 10 years if the proposed 1975-76 village budget is accepted without modification.

The $0.1 million budget for the general fund includes an estimated tax rate of .0642 per $100 equalized assessed valuation. This year's village tax rate is expected to be .0602.

Taxes for the 1975-76 budget will show up on the tax bill that will be due in August 1976.

The estimated .0642 rate does not include the cost of issuing $3.5 million in general-obligation bonds for flood control, or the cost of a proposed addition to the library that will be voted on April 1 and could add another .11 to the rate.

The budget provides for a very modest increase in personnel, six firemen and six policemen, and no expansion of existing services," said Kenneth Bonder, finance director.

ALMOST ALL of the increase in the proposed 1975-76 budget is due to inflation, he said, including a proposed 8 per cent cost-of-living adjustment for village employees.

So far Arlington Heights policemen and firemen have given no public indication whether the proposed 8 per cent wage increase is acceptable to them. Review of the police and fire department budgets is not expected until next Tuesday or Thursday.

This year, unlike the past several years, representatives of police and fire department employees have been instructed not to appear at the public budget hearings. Instead, they have been discussing wage requests with Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson who in turn is expected to report to the village board's finance committee.

THE ESTIMATED record-high tax rate in the proposed budget could be reduced if the village board opts to use a part of its federal revenue-sharing funds to meet operating expenses otherwise covered by the real estate tax.

Trustee Frank Palmator, chairman of the finance committee, already has said that this is a "very definite possibility." This year the village will use $154,000 in revenue sharing for operating expenses.

The recent hiring of seven employees under a federal emergency unemployment program saved further pressure on the budget, Bonder said.

"The timing of that program was just perfect," he said.

The seven new employees will work on public works jobs, as custodian and clerk-typists.

BESIDES POSSIBLE demands for higher wages, budget requests from the youth council and the senior citizens commission could add to the tension on this year's finances.

Palmator has indicated the village probably will fund at least part of the $30,250 requested by the youth council and the $64,000 asked for by the senior citizens' commission.

The senior citizens budget request will be discussed next Wednesday, and the youth council proposal is set for a hearing on Feb. 24.

The 1975-76 budget for the first time includes revenue from the village's 2 per cent hotel tax, an estimated $75,000, but does not have any projection for a possible 10-cent daily parking tax or real estate transfer tax, both of which are under consideration.

FBI seizes counterfeit tape recordings in raid

federal law. Making illegal tapes is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000 for the first offense, police said. The penalty was only recently increased to those limits.

SKUDDER SAID the tapes may have been marketed in a variety of ways, including sales from the rear of trucks parked at state fairs or other public events. Legitimate manufacturers estimate they lose $7 each time a bootleg tape is sold.

The FBI said Greenwood and Moore leased the 2,000-square-foot unit recently and planned to move to a larger space across the street in the same industrial complex.

FBI agents began inventorying the contents of the building Thursday afternoon. The building will be sealed by court order. Police tipped off the FBI to the operation after they became suspicious of activities at the warehouse.

Skudder said the operation was probably the largest found in this area, although large tape-pirating systems have been found in the west and southwestern states. "I have read that of the tapes sold in this country, up to two-thirds are illegal," Skudder said.

FBI AGENTS count and sort thousands of stereo-tape recordings believed to have been made illegally in an Elk Grove Village warehouse. Agents raided the warehouse Thursday with the assistance of Elk Grove Village police.

Underwood 'interested' in schools job

A screening committee of the state school boards association recently was hired by the district to conduct a nationwide search for a new superintendent.

The committee is expected to submit a list of five or six candidates for the job in about two months.

Underwood previously served as superintendent in a North Dakota school system.

Kenneth Underwood, former superintendent of the West Virginia school system that erupted in a book-banning controversy, said Thursday he "would always be interested in a job in the Northwest suburbs."

Underwood, reached at his West Virginia home, said he did not know if he would accept the position of superintendent of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 if it were offered.

Underwood, 46, was superintendent of Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 from 1964-66. His name was submitted by Dist. 59 board member Judy Zanca to the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to be investigated as a possible candidate for the Dist. 59 superintendent's post.

"I don't have any idea what I'm going to do," Underwood said. "Right now, after what's happened, I'm just sitting back and enjoying life."

"My wife and I will be doing a lot of thinking over the next month and hope to make a decision on what we're going to be doing about March 1."

UNDERWOOD gained national prominence last fall when he became involved in a book-banning protest by parents in the Kanawha County, W. Va., school system, where he was superintendent. He resigned Jan. 31.

Death in crash ruled accident by coroner

The death of a Palatine Township woman who suffered fatal injuries Jan. 29 when a Schaumburg squad car crashed head-on with her auto was ruled accidental by a County Coroner's jury Thursday.

The inquest into the death of Christine Loran, 21, of 1079 N. Deer Ave., was held at the Oehler Funeral Home in Des Plaines.

Sidney Berman, a deputy coroner, said, "I am quite sure that the operator of the vehicle (Patrolman David Mabbitt) did not use the proper care and caution in operating his vehicle. However, I do not believe that not exercising that care and caution is tantamount to criminal negligence."

"But being a police officer, he sets an example and at all times should exercise that care and caution," he added.

Mabbitt, the squad-car driver, did not testify at the inquest. The accident occurred on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street, Schaumburg. The squad car was passing a slower moving vehicle on Roselle Road and swinging back into its lane of traffic when it sideswiped a car and crashed into the Loran vehicle, police said.
